More Than Meets the Eye

"Hey Jon, what's up?" asked the friend.

"Not much," said Jon Utterback, senior member of the football team.

"How does it feel to be a part of a school that is number one in everything from Spanish competitions to a nationally ranked football team, not to mention a five time state winner in a Marching Band?" asked the friend from Perry Township.

"It feels pretty great," said Jon,"but there's even more."

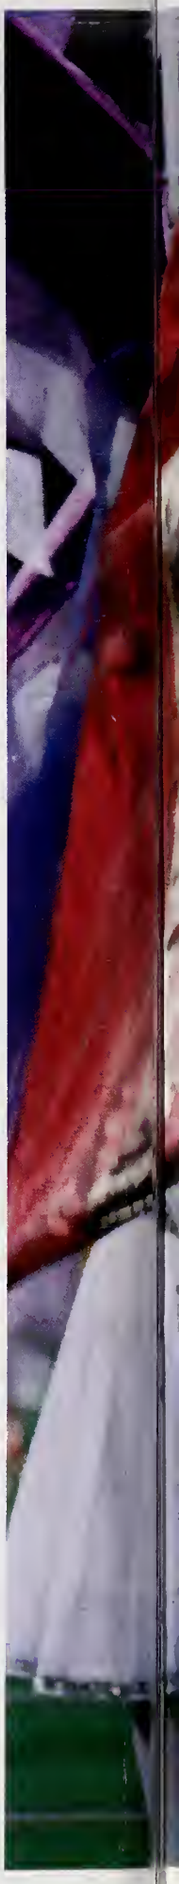

"What else could possibly be number one that hasn't already been recognized? asked the Perry Student.

"Are you kidding me? There are tons of things that have been happening at Ben Davis that are terrific and not a whole lot of people know about. Take, for instance, the construction of 20 new classrooms on the north side of the building. That's gonna be so cool cause Doc Voris, our science teacher, will be able to have more disection labs in the new science area.

"We've also rebuilt our football stadium. It now seats twice as many fans plus we have a neat scoreboard. The bleachers in the old gym have been torn out and new durable purple and white ones have replaced them. Everyone is excited about that.

More Than We Can Imagine

"A whopping six million dollars has been invested in the school, just for additions and renovations. A lot of the money has come from funds for additions and renovations," said Jon Utterback, senior, to his friend from Perry Township.

Jon didn't mention the new shelves, the new computers in almost every department, or the new lab equipment in the foreign language department.

"We've also won many awards," said Jon. "The yearbook staff produced an All-American award-winning yearbook, and the Spotlight staff captured several Harvey awards at the State Journalism Convention. The Madrigals were given a number one rating for their performance at a State competition, with the perfect score of seven out of a possible seven points. Seniors Karen Byers, Lisa Fraley, John Monnier, and David Hatchett were National Merit semi-finalists, and Steve Spratt, Stephen Board, and Chris Wright were National Merit commended seniors.

"Jon, it looks like you'll remember your high school years at Ben Davis, for a lot more than just the great championships in football and band," said the Perry Township friend.

"You'd better believe it," said Jon.

More Than The Most

Still thinking about the football dinner she attended just a few hours earlier, senior cheerleader Amy Adsit sat on her bed with Jenny Cornforth, another senior cheeleader.

"What's up?" asked Cornforth.

"I was just thinking," said Adsit.

"Is something wrong? Didn't you have fun tonight? You look kind of upset."said Cornforth

"Oh yeah, the dinner was great, but I was just thinking. Don't you sometimes get the feeling that people don't feel comfortable around us?" said Adsit very seriously.

"Yeah, I know what you mean. Some people think that all cheerleaders are stuck on themselves,"said Cornforth.

"I always try to be myself. I don't know how else to have good friends." said Adsit.

"Well, I wouldn't worry about it, because if people don't like you for yourself, then they aren't good enough to be your friends." said Cornforth.

"Thanks Jenny, I'm glad I have a friend like you." said Adsit.

"Yeah, so am I."

Week-Long Festivities Capped Off by Carousel

Yellow and blue steamers flowed from the ceiling and paperdoll cut-outs of the football players and cheerleaders decorated the brightly lit ferris wheel at the homecoming dance. The theme was 'Carousel.'

The couples started to dance as they reached the bridge that led to the cafeteria. Decked out in dresses, coats and ties. 150 couples joined friends from other schools and former graduates, as well as King Ron Hubbard and Queen Shannon Jensen.

'Ronny and I sat there on our bench, trying to take in the moment we knew we'd always remember,' said Jensen.

A highlight of the evening was when senior, Heather Holifield sang 'We've Only Just Begun.'

A popular activity of Homecoming week was the Powder Puff game between the junior and senior girls. The fans reached a record high attendance when they came to watch the seniors, coached by Bobby West and Chris Myrvold, dominate the juniors, coached by juniors Jason Delois and Jeff Miner. They won 34-0.

'Every play we ran seemed to do the trick,' said Missy Stephanoff, senior. 'The first string offense and defense really did the job.'

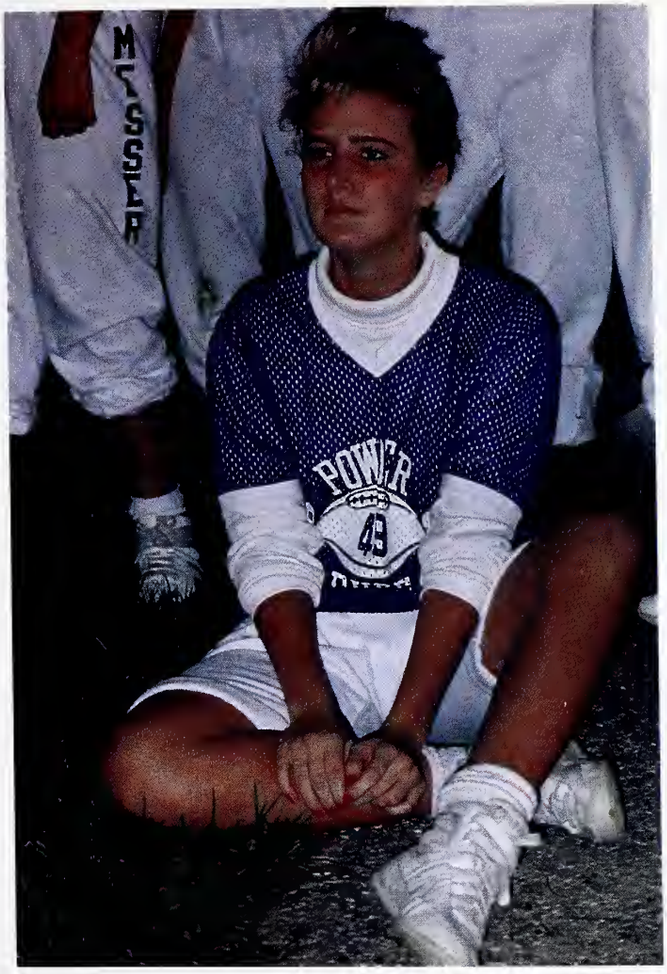

Touchdowns were scored by seniors Katie Diggs, Brandy Bell, and Jody York. Senior Sondra Fischel intercepted a pass but started to run to the opposite end zone, adding a bit of humor.

Practice Makes Perfect Players

It was the fourth period with only ten seconds left in the basketball game. The opposing team was ahead 69-68. The referee blew the whistle to stop play. One of the starting guards had twisted her ankle. "Susy," yelled the coach, to a girl sitting on the bench, "get in there!"

Susy had sat on the bench for most of the year. She was an average player who needed to work a lot harder than the other players. She thought, "Why now? Of all the moments!" but she knew that this was the moment she had been waiting for, the moment she would finally prove herself. As she dribbled down the floor, she saw the chance for an open shot. She shot the ball and it went right into the basket. The game was over, and it had been won because of Susy.

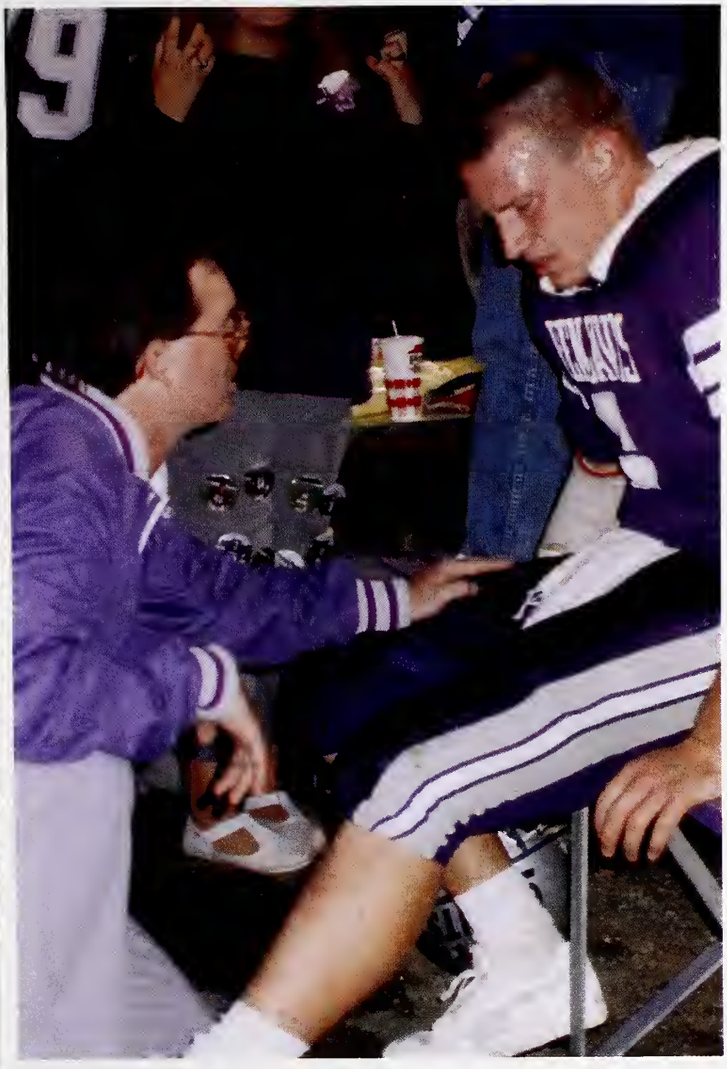

Although benchwarmers didn't always turn out to be heroes, their importance to the team was greater than most students realized.

"Without your bench people, your program just isn't going to be successful," said Priscilla Dillow, Volleyball coach.

While benchwarmers dream of the one moment of glory, their important job was to help their teammates as much as possible.

No Pain, No Gain

"As I lay there, I thought I would never be able to play again. The thought made me sick to my stomach. It was hard to look at the other players who were my best friends," said Jon Utterback, senior. Utterback suffered an anterior cruciate ligament tear during the football jamboree when he was hit from the blind-side by a Lawrence Central player. The injury put him out for the season.

Football is thought to be the most dangerous sport, but most of the injuries that occur in football could also happen in baseball, soccer, or any other sport. Football players are trained to take hits, and their pads are tested by specialists to protect the players.

"Football is not as dangerous as people think. Statistics prove that every time someone gets into a car, he takes a bigger chance of getting hurt than a football player does," said Coach Dick Dullaghan.

Football is not the only dangerous sport, as varsity Cross Country runner Brian Houston showed during the 89' season. "My injury was a stress-fraction. It was mostly caused by my running in a 10K race while not in shape. I put a lot of stress on my legs," said Huston. Huston was out for part of the season, but made it back to compete with the team in county.

When someone does get hurt, there are trainers on the sidelines waiting to help him, "I go out to them and reassure them that they will be all right. " said Wendy Shelley, athletic trainer.

No matter what sport someone participates in, he can easily get hurt. It all depends on how he trained and how careful he was during the game or meet.

Worthy Worshipping

Junior high students often envied the life styles of senior high school students. They admired the cars, clothes, and freedom available to high school students.

"It seemed I would never get to high school, I thought I'd be stuck in junior high. I thought I'd DIE! I believed kids in high school were so much cooler than those in junior high. Now that I am in school I see that it wasn't such a big deal after all," said Kelly Vargo, junior.

The End in Friends

A painful experience in life is losing emotional touch with an old friend. When Angie walks down the hall at school, she sees Wendy and thinks of all the great times they have shared. The memories are vivid but yet all the old friends say to each other is "Hello," and walk on. As teen-agers grow and change so do their friendships.

It is common for friends to lose touch even though they go to the same school. "My best friend and I were friends all through junior high, but when we got to high school, things just changed and we went our different ways," said Jason Yarborough, senior.

Each time a student attends a new school there's a larger groups of friends to choose from. "I was best friends with a girl in junior high and at the beginning of high school, but after that we both met new people , and our friendship just slowly ended," said Angie Jones, senior.

Many students try to keep a friendship going, but fail. "He had his new friends, and it was like I wasn't part of this 'new' group so he left me out." said Yarborough.

Losing touch with an old friend usually happens gradually and when a person finally realizes that he has lost touch, it is painful. "When I see my old friend with another group or in the hall and all we have to say to each other is "Hello", I think about the past and it hits me that I don't know her anymore," said Jones.

The Right Stuff

When most guys dream of dating a gal, they may envision a dark tan, perfect body, long blonde hair, and sparkling blue eyes, while gals dream of a guy with big muscles, a nice tan, perfect features and a lot of money.

While agreeing that being born with that perfect body or an engaging smile would be nice, most students know appearance isn't everything. For them it is also important that a person be good-looking on the inside.

"I don't like it when guys act stuck up as if they were 'Mr. Macho' and that I should feel lucky to be with them. I like someone who is pleasant, treats me well, and likes me because I'm me." said Stacy Brown, senior.

Dorothy McFarland, senior, said, "It's great to be with guys who carry on an intellectual conversation. It also helps if they are interested in you but also interested in their own activities." □ by Angie Sublett

The Swinging 60's

Imagine yourself in another time with teens sitting at a drive-in restaurant, listening to 'The Lettermen', 'The Beatles', and 'The Who' on jukeboxes that light up and highlight girls dressed in mini-skirts and loafers dancing with tight-jeaned boys.

This was a typical Friday night for a teen of the 60's. While not quite the twilight zone, it was different from the teen fun spots of today.

"When I was in high school, everyone went to a drive-in called 'Toughies', " said Mary Frentz, counselor.

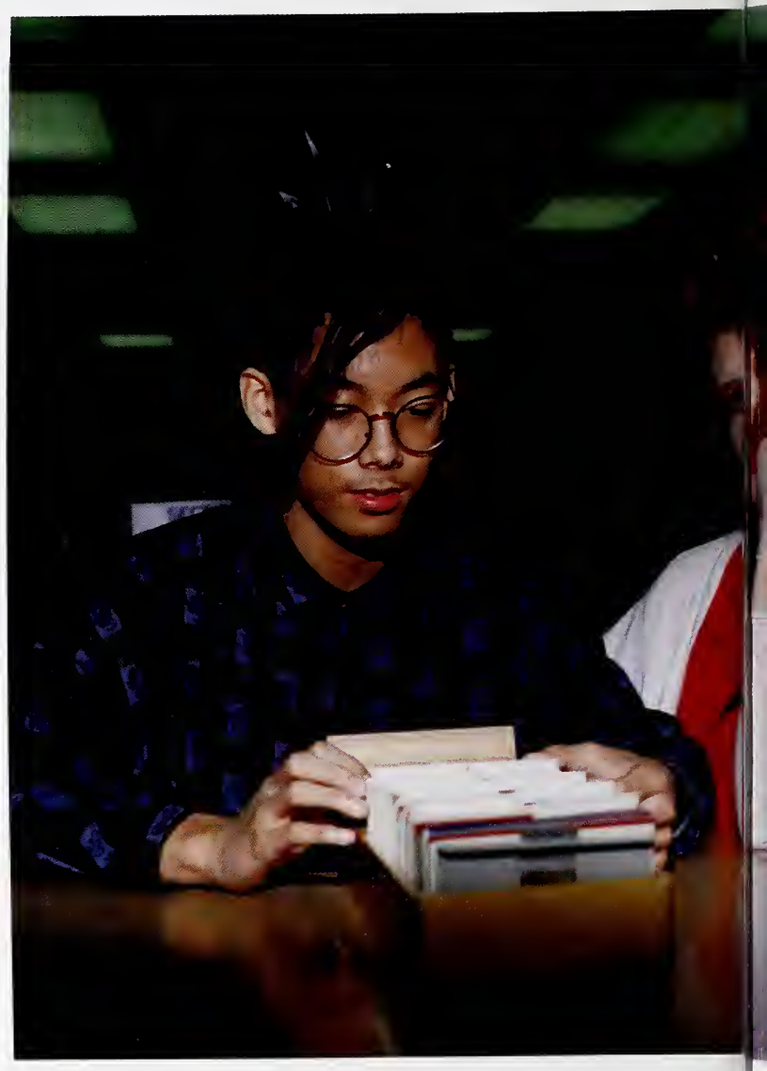

Also among the list of activities for the 60's teen was going to ballrooms. Every Friday night high school students gathered at the local ballroom to sing, dance, and socialize.

"The big thing about going to the ballroom was not the arrival, but with whom you left, " said Janet McKinney, English.

"In my senior year of high school 'The Beatles' had just come out and everyone was doing 'The Twist'," said Karen Bennett, English.

Although teens from other generations find activities that seem quite odd, they also find similarities. One thing they definitely have in common is the need to have fun, no matter how.

I Hate Complainers

Everybody has problems, but some people seem to have more than others and they like to tell the world about it: "Oh dear, what a day! My hair looks horrid; my dad didn't leave me any lunch money; my goofy sister missed the bus and I had to take her to school with me....", and on and on.

Few students like to be around the constant complainer, but are we all a bit guilty?

Senior Nancy Dewitt said, "I find myself complaining about my car, and to my parents about needing more money!"

Guys also admitted complaining. Kelly Lattimore, junior, said, "I find myself complaining about clothes. I never seem to have enough clothes, even if I just went shopping the night before."

Things may never be the way we like them or want them, but complaining accomplishes nothing.

Daring To Be Different

"So we're different color and we're different breeds. Different people have different needs. I can't understand what makes a man hate another man. Help me understand."

These lyrics of a song by the band, 'Depeche Mode' expressed the lifestyle of a group of students at Ben Davis who consider themselves "a different breed." They were the kids with the spiked and dyed hair, the off-the-wall clothing, and a different view of life. "We chose a different lifestyle to escape the mass brainwashing of the mainstream," said Todd Sulkoff, junior.

The mainstream, they contend is the lifestyle most people choose. It is living life the way everyone else does, the way they are "supposed" to. "It's so easy to go through life having your choices made for you by society," said Sulkoff.

"Cultural" was the term they used to describe themselves. "We're cultural people in that we have an open mind to try different things," said Jason Galloway, senior.

These different things applied mostly to appearance. As far as their views on social and political issues, they basically felt the same as many other people. Social issues were of great concern to them. "I worry about starvation and world peace," said Kris Harned, sophomore.

Their dress and hair styles were considered strange, but to them it was essential to dress to escape the mainstream, and also because to them it reflected life as it is, chaotic and unorganized, according to Sulkoff.

They considered music a reflection of their personalities. To them, music was a way to express feelings and their music, they admit, is very different. "It's not all love and flowers like WZPL. Our music gives us an idea of what's actually going on in the world," said Erica Murray,senior.

Why they choose a different lifestyle brings out various reasons. For most of them, it was a gradual growth into what was already there. "I didn't just decide one day to become 'New Wave'. It was always there. I started liking the music, the clothes, the hairstyles, the ideas, and the people." said Galloway.

They were called weird; they were called strange; they were even called freaks.

"I just want people to know that we're all basically the same. We all want the same things from life. People should open their minds because they're going to have to adjust to someone different from themselves."

Ben Davis's Halls Are Alive With the Sound of Music

Ranked among one of the top plays ever performed at Ben Davis, the classic musical The Sound of Music earned its success through hard work and determination of the performers and stage crew.

The stage crew and cast spent three to six hours a night for ten weeks trying to perfect the musical. "This group of students was committed and wanted to do a good job," said Mr. Rex Haviland, Assistant Director of Drama "but they also had fun with the show."

The exceptionally strong stage crew ran the show with only ten members. They ran lights, sound, and set up all of the scenes.

The Sound of Music portrayed Maria, sent from the Abby to be a governess to seven children. Her life changed drastically as she learned to love the children and their father.

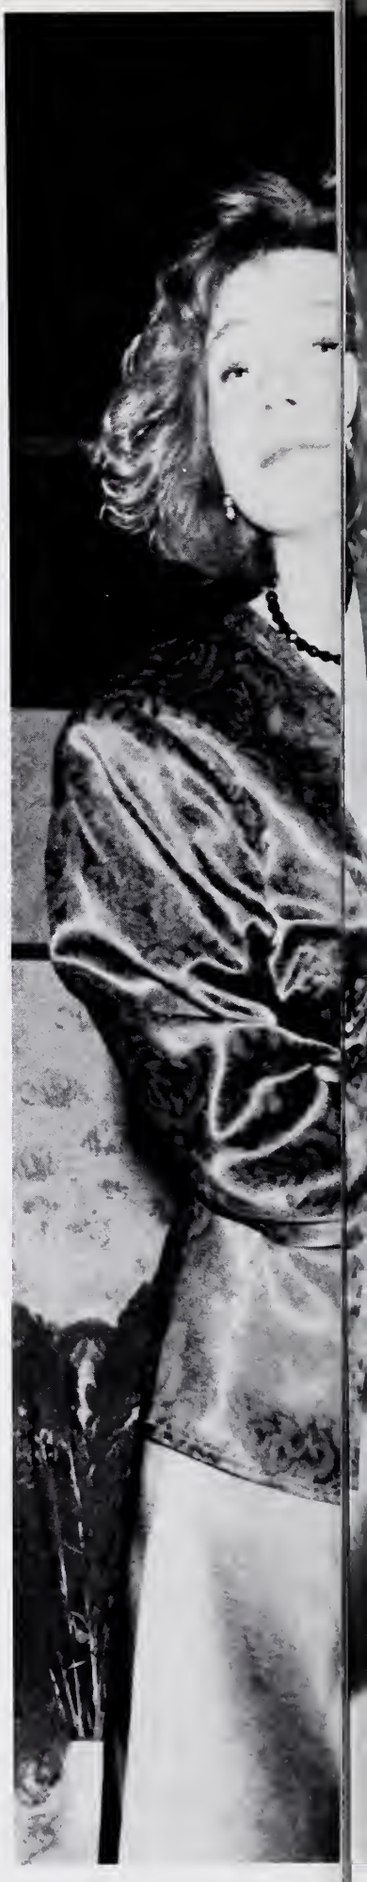

The lead roles, Maria and Captain George Von Trapp, were played by seniors Heather Holifield and Jason Yarbrough. "Yarbrough added brilliant adlibbing to his interpretation," said sophomore Neal Crisp. Yarbrough planned to attend a fine arts college in California where he hoped to be on center stage again. Heather Holifield gave new character and perspective to Maria, according to junior Barbara Woodford.

The Sound of Music was expected to break even financially, even though $1500 was spent on royalties alone. The royalties did not include the cost of the materials needed to build the sets.

One Moment in Time For the Last Time

The theme of the evening's festivities was "One Moment in Time." For one couple, Prom King Kent Britt and Queen Shannon Jensen, the evening lived up to expectations. "I don't think anyone deserved it more than Kent did," said Jensen. "I'm not saying that because he's my boyfriend, but because he's my 'best' friend."

Although most students enjoyed the evening, a few would have made changes if they had the chance. "If I could change only one thing, it would definitely be to make the dance floor bigger," said Neeli Carpenter, junior.

The idea that 'attending the high school prom is a MUST', was still in vogue.. "It's a reward for all the years you've been in high school, sorta like a going away party," said senior Tank Adams. "I feel it's important because it's your last year to party with all of your high school friends."

The senior prom court included, Tank Adams and Katie Diggs; Shannon Jensen and Kent Britt; Ron Hubbard and Lisa Long; and Jason Yarbrough and Hope Turner. Artistic Talents Honored

To honor the creative talent in the Wayne Township Schools, Ben Davis High School every two years hosts an "Arts Alive Festival" featuring singing, dancing, drama, painting, and sculpting.

This year's festival drew a crowd of almost 5,000. Teachers of art, drama and choir classes coached students to perform and showcase at the Arts Alive festival.

"I worked hard on my painting and was confident I had done a good job. When my teacher asked me to enter it at Arts Alive, I knew I also had confidence in myself," said Darren Hile, senior.

With its many exhibits and performances, the festival was a definite success. Mr. Larry Hurt, head of the committee, said, "It is hard to pin point the most popular event, but I think the biggest turn out was for the choir and one act play performances."

An addition to the festival was the newly formed children's choir "Echo's" under the direction of Ruth Artman. First lady Susan Bayh cut the ribbon to open the ceremony.

This festival, supported by the township, has started a new tradition that allows young artists to be recognized for their efforts and to be encouraged to develop their talents.

Madman Stopped Forever

Americans will sleep better knowing that the 42 year-old convicted murderer Ted Bundy was executed in Starke, Florida, January 25. Though the execution was postponed three times because of appeals, Bundy was finally executed for killing 11 year-old Kimberly Diane Leach.

"I think the execution was long over due. After killing so many women, he finally got what he deserved," said junior Christy Atwell.

Junior Tracy Willingham and other students felt Bundy should have been executed sooner. "Due process takes too long." said Willingham.

Bundy's intelligence, looks and charm made him an unlikely murderer, but it may have been those qualities that led countless women to their death. His looks made women not suspect him," said Angela Cooper.

Some students were unaware of Bundy's crimes until his death, but they felt that the death penalty is just punishment for killers.

Sophomore Jennifer Thomas was for the death penalty, but some others felt it was unconstitutional.

"Bundy's execution did cause many to think about capital punishment,"said Cooper, "It made me stop and think about my beliefs."

Rebuilt and Ready

The temperature was 42° Farenheit as the ice covered space shuttle Challenger awaited a seemingly routine launch. All of the precautions were thought to have been taken, but 71 seconds after liftoff a large cloud of smoke appeared.

Spectators assumed that the Challenger would emerge, but it didn't. Moments later an announcement revealed that a major malfunction had taken place.

John Twa, sophomore, said "I thought the whole thing was a joke. I assumed that my friends were kidding me. When I got home that night, I heard the shocking news. I couldn't believe something could go so wrong. When they were ready to launch the Discovery, I didn't know what to expect. I only hoped for a better outcome than before."

Several changes were made the 33 months after the disaster. The solid rocket boosters, which caused the explosion, were redesigned to insure safe launches in the future. An additional O-Ring was added to prevent fuel leakage. Numerous changes were also made to the shuttle itself.

From January 28, 1986, until November 16, 1988, America had not returned to space. For the next three years the program remained on the ground. Now the space shuttle Discovery was suited up and ready to go, but the wait on the launch pad would be longer than expected.

Finally, mission control announced, "We have liftoff. America returns to space."

Americans were happy to be back in space, but they still remembered that day.

Christopher Slear, sophomore, reflected to that day. "I was sitting in drafting class watching the launch when I saw the smoke cloud. I thought the shuttle would emerge. Then they announced what had happened. It was the most devastating emotion I have ever had. It is a day in my life that I will never forget."

Goodbye To The Gipper

After two terms in office, President Ronald Reagan's departure was a victory to some, and a loss to others. But because President Bush followed his footsteps, "Reagan Fans" had no need to fret.

President Bush promised a "kinder, gentler nation."

"It's going to be hard for Bush to accomplish this with all the terrorism going on today," said senior Nicole Heritier.

Americans waited in anticipation to see if Bush would be "Reagan II, the Sequel" or a president in his own way. "Working under someone may mean you share common interests, but it doesn't mean you share the same views," said Heritier.

Sophomore Melissa Smith said, "I hope Bush will have the same decision making skills as Reagan."

An issue concerning America is the relationship between the Soviet Union and the United States. During the last few years of the Reagan presidency, the relationship between the superpowers was a more congenial one. The question for many Americans was "Can Bush maintain this relationship?"

Smith said, "The relationship will change. I don't feel Gorbachev will like Bush."

Heritier disagreed,"I think it will just take Gorbachev some time to adjust, and get to know Bush."

The Class of '89 Celebrates

On the eve of June 2, 725 seniors dressed in purple robes and mortarboards, came together to celebrate their graduation.

The Purple Aires sang "Forever Friends" while the Giant Band played the traditional tunes of "Auld Lang Syne" and "Pomp and Circumstance." Valedictorian John Monnier and Salutatorian Karen Byers both addressed the class.

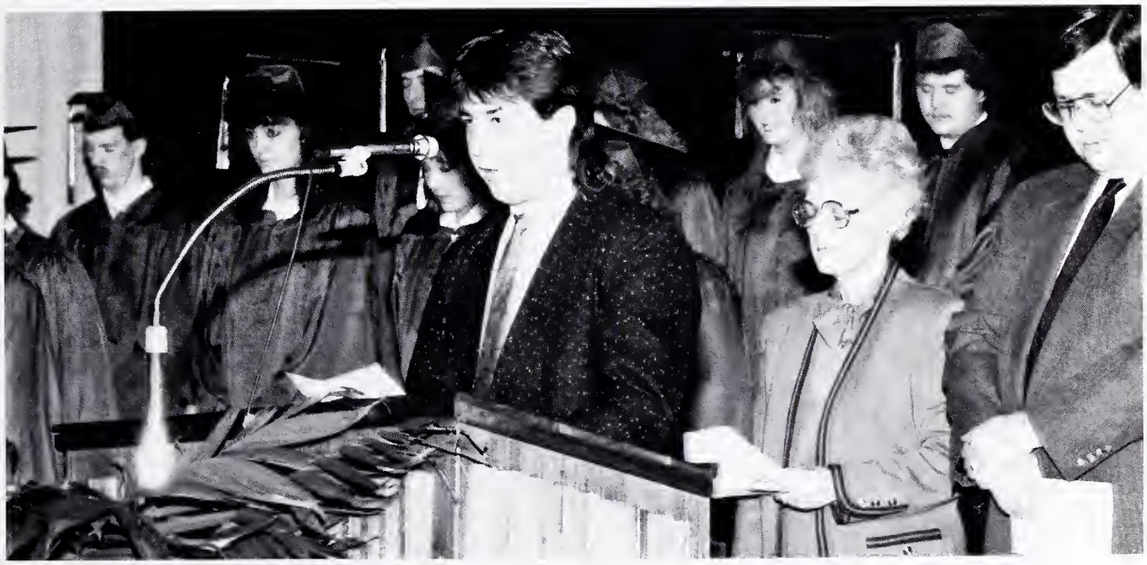

"I have the utmost respect for the class of '89," said Monnier, "but if we fail to take responsibility for our future, that respect will be lost forever. As for now, we will graduate, leave the halls of Ben Davis, and take with us a sense of pride in ourselves."

The class had reason to be proud. Seventeen percent of them were honored at the First Annual Evening of Excellence including National Merit Finalists Karen Byers, Lisa Fraley, David Hatchett, and John Monnier.

Together with these memories, the seniors also reflected on less serious times. Byers said she will never forget 60's day when senior Jason Yarborough wore a poodle skirt to school. Senior Ron Hubbard said his most memorable moments were the cold classrooms, clocks that couldn't tell time, trips to the track (Carburation day lives!), and senior day at Eagle Creek.

With 12 years of schooling under their belts, the graduates went their separate ways. Although sad to leave the security of friends and family, they were excited about new challenges. In her farewell speech Byers said, " Let's show the world what we're made of!"

The More The Better

So, tomorrow's assignment will be twenty pages and you can expect to be quized over the reading also," said Mr. John Schwegman, English.

"Only twenty pages? What does he think we are-speed readers? I'm not allowed to go over 13 words per minute!" said sophomore Mandy Murdock.

"Oh, come on, it's not so bad," said Jud Bishop.

Mandy, if Mr. Schwegman didn't assign reading material and quiz us the next day, would you or anyone else read it?"

"Yeah, I know. But homework every night starts to get to me."

"I was afraid you'd say that! I'm just kidding! American Lit & Comp isn't really just one huge homework assignment like everyone makes it out to be. There's more to classes than just reading and quizes. We get to learn about all the different periods in American literature and the authors and their heritage. It's kind of like learning out of a narrative social studies book. It's pretty fun and interesting."

"Yeah, but don't let Schwegman know we like it."

We the People

"Our goverment should benefit, protect and carry out the peoples' wishes. It is complex and students must learn how it operates," said Mr. Antonopoulos, social studies.

To make sure the students understood how the government operated, the classes didn't just emphasize the theory of government, but had students learn about it through first hand experience.

"It's similar to Conner Prarie, which also shows the everyday lifestyle of our ancestors,"said Woodard.

Although visiting Metamora was an educational experience, the students also planned on using what they learned for a school presentation.

"While we were there, we filmed for a presentation to the school board," said Woodard. "We also plan on using some of the pictures for backdrops for a play we wrote and are presenting to the elementary schools."

Using the backdrop from Metamora, the classes put on the play at Westlake Elementary.

In the play, we depicted early colonial life," said Laura Bain, junior. "We did several different and unrelated skits and afterwards we held a question and answer period to see if they wanted to know anything else or it they didn't understand something."

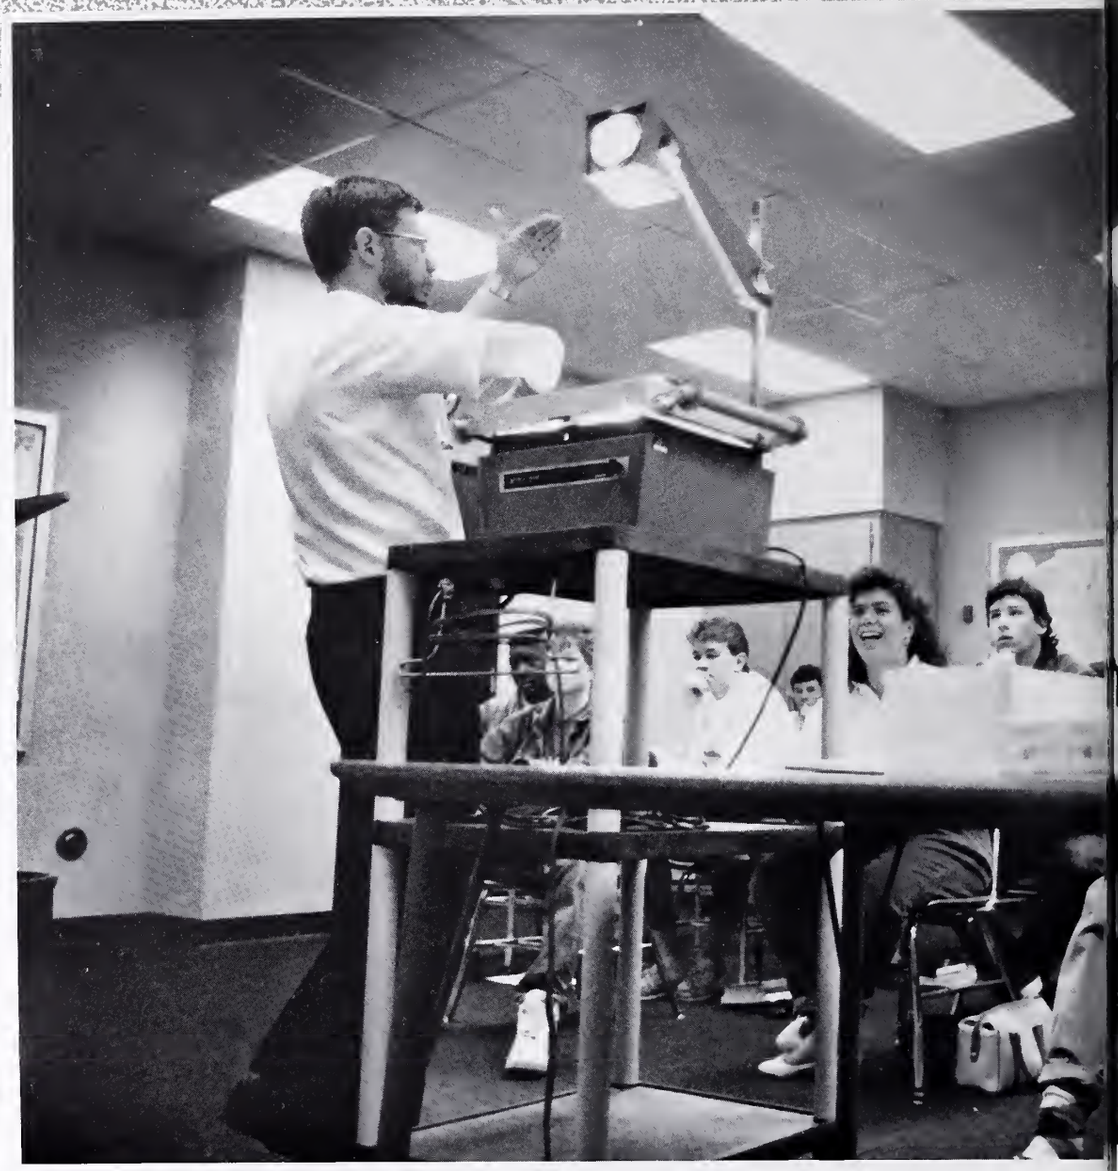

The students also learned first hand how a democratic society elects its officials by participating in a mock election.

"During the mock election I helped register students," said Julie Piatt, junior. "Before the election I was scared to vote on a voting machine, but now I feel I can go into a voting booth and I'll know what to do."

Antonopoulos felt getting the students to vote was an important part of government class.

"If we do not get involved with the government, it will take away our money and freedom," said Antonopoulos.

Senior Rich Westcott agreed.

"We live in a democracy but if we don't learn how it operates and participate in it, it no longer is a democracy," said Westcott.

Throughout the semester each student learned about his rights and duties in and out of the classroom.

However, learning about our government is only the first step to citizenship.

If I hadn't had government class I probably wouldn't understand how lucky I am to live in the United States," said Kenna McNeeley, senior. "I not only learned the rights and freedoms I have as an American Citizen, but I learned how other governments operate ."

However, besides learning about their rights as citizens, the students also learned the responsibility of carrying out the laws.

"In government class I learned what the laws mean," said McNeeley. "Now I know how to use these laws to my advantage."

"Our government is only as good as the people are," said Antonopoulos. "We are the source of it."

What qualities must a good photographer possess? According to Mr. Larry Lambert, teacher, a good photographer is a person who has a good eye and is able to pick out elements within a given scene. Lambert, an award winning photographer, thought that students here had the potential to become professional photographers.

Senior Rich Westscott wanted to become a professional photographer. One of Westscott's best pictures was an action shot of a basketball player in mid-air making a layup with a defender trying to block the shot. 'I get a good feeling when I stop time,' said Westscott. 'It's sort of like holding onto a feeling.'

Senior Paul Sizemore felt that photography was an extension of art.

Lambert agreed and required that students have artistic ability.

The five criteriun to which Lambert held students were composition, contrast, print condition, and the mounting of pictures. Also students must fulfill all assignments.

The classes Lambert taught range from PhotographyI Beginners, to PhotographyIV Commercial Photography. All students who took the classes were expected to provide their own 35mm cameras, film, and film paper. They also had to pay for the developing of all pictures they took inside and outside of class. Although the class was expensive to take, giving the students the opportunity to take pictures during and after class gave them more time to finish their assignments. "It helps them to discover a wider variety of subjects than school related items," said Lambert.

Photographers could express their feelings through any of their pictures, but they found more things they could relate to outside of school. For example, some took pictures of landscapes, city scenes, including alleys and trashcans, and pictures of city lights after dark. Pictures of Coke cans, portraits of city people and photos with special effects were also popular.

Growing, Growing, Gone

Not only do the students learn about plants from textbooks but they also work with, grow, and even sell them. "The students work with about 100 different types of plants in this course," said Richard Tomczyk, vocational.

This includes vegetables, everything from tomatoes to cabbage plants. "We give them a lot of variety so their skills are varied," said Tomczyk.

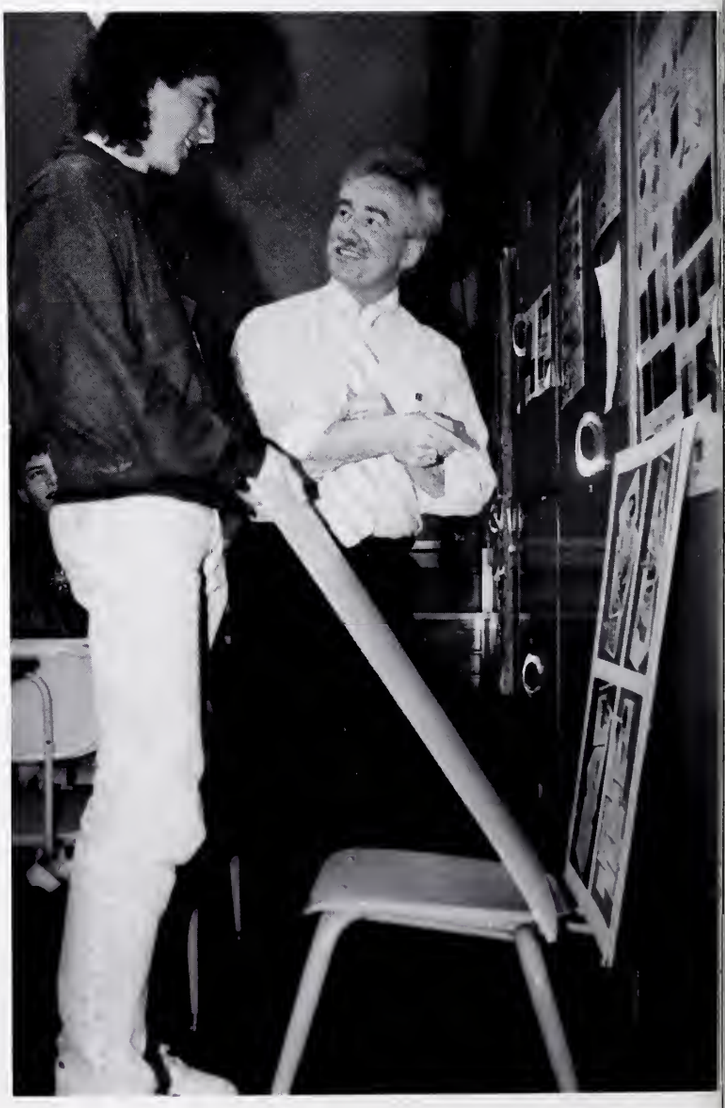

A fully equipped greenhouse was constructed ten years ago when an addition was put on the vocational wing. This greenhouse is where the students spend most of their classtime.

Christmas and Valentine's Day are both busy times for the class. They grow hundreds of poinsettas and flowers for these holidays and also provide flowers for weddings and parties. "We give customers a great price and, in turn, the students gain valuable experience," said Tomczyk.

Some students enroll to learn about plants as a hobby, but most are looking for a future in the horticulture business. "It is good experience for a job while in high school and it is good preparation for the future," said Karla Pierle, senior.

Like other vocational classes, students from surrounding schools also can enroll in the class. "I feel fortunate to be able to come here for this class since we don't have it at my school," said Michelle Trenum, a junior at Brownsburg High School.

While the class is fun, it offers excellent training for those who plan to pursue horticulture as a career. □ by Darren Ane

Wave of the Future

Imagine a school in the year 2010 where students are learning about important inventions. The teacher says, "Today we will learn about an instrument called the typewriter. It was once used to communicate the written word."

In 1988, the word processor was used more frequently in business departments than the typewriter. Word processors have advantages over the typewriters because of their ability to do so many different jobs at once.

Ms. Jane Atwood, business, said, "I prefer word processors because they accomplish all that typewriters do plus perform additional functions. All errors can be corrected before printing thus producing perfect quality copy. Greater speed and efficiency are definite plusses."

Students were more interested and curious to learn about word processors because they seemed like a computer. However, typing is still a prerequisite because the keyboard and the basics of typing must be learned before word processors can be mastered.

"Colleges encourage students to take business courses on the college level. We provide excellent equipment and opportunities to learn business skills, and they come free," said Atwood.

"Don't pillowcases come with the pillows when you buy them?" said a student in Independent Living.

The class is designed to help prepare them for life on their own by teaching them skills that are required in the real world. The course emphasized meal planning, laundry, mending, budgeting, and entertaining.

Seniors who realized they needed survival skills if they were going to live on their own signed up for the class.

The all-male class generally was limited to an enrollment of 18 to 24 because of the work stations in the laboratory.

"Most students enjoy the class," said Ms Kay Dunbar, "but a frequent remark after doing the class assignments was, "I'm never going to leave home."

Students were encouraged to share family recipes such as pita bread from Syria and pieroghi from Poland.

"I enjoyed learning all the new recipes. I even shared them with my mother," said senior Scott Roberts. "Homemade cinnamon rolls were the best."

No Time To Kill

Being on a publication staff called for spending a lot of time, patience, and hard work. The Spotlight and Keyhole staffs spent many evenings at school to meet important deadlines. Some Spotlight members even gave up weekend time for a special edition.

"After the football team won state, we decided to do something special for them," said Kevin Lee, senior. "We spent our Sunday evening at school putting together a four page issue for the state champs."

The Spotlight staff was lead by the new advisor, Ms Janet McKinney. "Ms McKinney taught me a lot," said editor Finn. "She helped me become more effective as a writer."

Although the yearbook staff stayed late on Thursdays for production the editors stayed throughout the week.

"Nearing deadline time, the editors stay late at least a couple of times a week," said Darren Ane, senior and assistant editor of the Keyhole. "But when you make the deadline, you feel a sense of accomplishment."

Keyhole and Spotlight members attended journalism camp at Ball State University.

Good Morning, Ben Davis

"Good morning, this is WBDG, Indianapolis. WBDG is licensed by the Metropolitan School District of Wayne Township and is operated by the students of Ben Davis High School." This announcement by the morning disc jockey starts the days broadcast for radio students at BDHS.

In the '87-'88 school year, the radio staff purchased a cellular phone for the broadcasting of sporting events, a step forward in new technology. The cellular phone is cordless and runs off of batteries. It may be taken a distance as far as Terre Haute to Muncie, and allows instant broadcasting to take place.

"This device saves us about $100 to $150 per game. On the plan we have, all of our calls after seven and on weekends are free," said Mr. Paul Mendenhall, communications. "The cellular phone has good quality and saves money as well as giving the staff flexibility."

Although the cellular phone was donated by Communications Maintenance Inc., a $400 adapter was necessary for the operations of the phone, and the staff paid a monthly fee of $50.

Despite the many advantages, the cellular phone had a few disadvantages. "The cellular phone was difficult and confusing to use at first." said senior Dan Alsop. "Also there were a few locations where the phone didn't operate well, such as in indoor gyms where reception was a problem."

The student-run station operated 365 days a year, from 15 to 17 hours a day and seemed to have a wide audience.

Announcers enjoyed covering the away games with the cellular phone. "It made us look like professionals. Chics go for that stuff, ya know?" said senior Tim Rakoczy.

According to Mr. Paul Mendenhal the staff put in long hours and sacrificed time for other activities.

The radio staff members had opportunities to meet interesting people. "We are like a small family," said Rakoczy. "I will really miss it next year."

Rakoczy said he dreaded the day he will say for the last time, "That concludes today's programming on WBDG, Indianapolis. WBDG is licensed by the Metropolitan School District of Wayne Township and is operated by the students of Ben Davis High School. WBDG broadcasts on a frequency of 90.9 megahertz, with an effective radiated power of 400 Watts vertical and horizontal. Join us for more commercial free music and information tomorrow morning. Good Night!"

Everyone's Screaming, 'Play It Again, Ben Davis'

Determined to continue the Ben Davis tradition of excellence, the 260 member Marching Band successfully maintained its position as Indiana Marching Band State Champions.

Not only did the Marching Giants win a fifth championship, but they also set a state record for most consecutive wins. All together, the Giants have racked up 13 championship titles.

Led by senior drum majors Dawn Williams, Beth Eastham, Crissie Dennie, and John Lephart, the band performed renditions of "Medieval Suite", "The Man I Love"/"I got Rhythm", and "Appalachian Spring" for their championship performance.

"We chose to use these songs in order to get a wide variety. We like to please the audience because that's who we're there to play for," said Lephart, drum major.

Besides the state championship, the band also placed first in other competitions such as the Riley Marching Festival in Greenfield, the Mid-State Marching Contest, and the Kokomo Invitational.

The band was honored for its many victories by Dr. Edward Bowes, Wayne Township School System Superintendent, when he designated November 7 as "Marching Band Appreciation Day" in the township. The school band was presented a large music note made of purple and white carnations by the student body.

"It was really great, because it was the first time Monday Night Football had come to Indianapolis. It was packed and we like performing for big crowds. We were proud to do the show," said band director, Jim Butz.

Songs Across the Land

Not only did the Internationals sing of far away lands and places, they traveled to far away places.

Made up of 29 members, the group auditioned to perform at Disney World by sending an audio and video tape to the entertainment committee. When accepted, senior Tracey McCormack said, "I'm excited. Disney World is so well known all over the world."

The trip cost $10,000 which the group raised by working for it. Ms. Patti Schaffer, choir director, explained, "We call each Friday dollar day. The girls have the opportunity to give a dollar or more each Friday. We also had fund raisers and car washes to raise the money."

The trip to Disney World wasn't the only traveling done by choir groups. The all-girl Show Choir, the Soundsations, traveled to Chicago where they performed Christmas music at the Hyatt Regency Hotel and sang songs ranging from "Merry Christmas Darling" to "Joy to the World."

On December 19th the group took a train to Chicago, performed an afternoon show and spent the next few hours shopping at the Watertower and Hard Rock Cafe. "We had a lot of fun singing and spending money," said Dorthy McFarland, senior.

While the choirs attracted students, the directors still worried about recruiting.

"Mr. Gary Robinson, choir director, said "I've noticed that high school kids today are under more academic pressures and are offered more extracurricular activities. In this day and age of computers and electronics recruiting is harder than it used to be."

In the past, high school choirs just stood and sang. Now they have different costumes, sing in different languages, dance, and travel.

Not Just Making the Grade

Human beings today rely on medical personnel to provide for their health and well-being. Where do these people come from? How do they know so much about how people's bodies function, and where do they get the knowledge to cure illnesses? These questions and more are answered in the vocational course, Health Occupations.

"In many health classes students are there only to get a grade, but for me, Health Occupations is training me for my future. It's teaching me about skills necessary for a job in the medical field," said senior Teresa Morales.

Besides class lectures, hands on training was used to advance learning. The students practiced CPR skills, took each others blood pressure and administered general patient care.

"We are taught how to move a partially paralyzed person to different positions," said senior Jennifer Morris. "We also must learn to change sheets without moving the patient."

For additional practical experience, the class took field trips to local medical facilities such as St. Vincents Nursing, Central State Mental Health, Riley Pediatrics, and the Methodist Sports Center to learn from the professionals there.

"Actually going to hospitals and health care facilities made what I was learning seem real. I saw and heard things that I will be experiencing in a health career," said Morales.

Health Occupations teacher Ms. Sandra Irwin felt vocational students have a higher rate of employment because they are taught job placement skills.

The course teaches and prepares students about how to find a job or school in the medical field.

Preparing for More Than a Meal

The course teaches and prepares students about how to find a job or school in the medical field.

Jamie Nicely, class of 85 is now a Medical Assistant at Indiana University Hospital. "After taking Health Occupations in high school, I knew I was prepared for the courses. Many of the terms and procedures, I had already learned in high school."

More importantly Health Occupations had given her a good idea about what a career as a medical assistant would be like. She didn't have to elect numerous courses to find a career she liked.

Another former student, Erica Scisker. '87, who took the Health Occupations class said, "Most of the techniques we learned were helpful in pursuing a career. It helped to prepare me for my career as a nurse and phlebotomist at the IU hospital. I knew that I wanted to go into the medical field."

Health Occupations wasn't an ordinary class of Ben Davis students, but also of Mooresville students. It met three hours a day. "It gave students more time for hands-on training," said Irwin. De De Pickel, a student from Mooresville, felt the hands on experience taught students more about people and their feelings. The students and the teachers got along well, considering they had to be together for three hours a day. "Everybody gave a little of himself to help out others" said Mooresville student Lee Carnes.

Michelle Martin, class of '86 agreed; "The class was informal and comfortable. Everyone got along better that way."

Carnes, Sciskey, Pickel, and Martin all agreed that another important thing they learned in Health Occupations was terminology. The graduates said that they couldn't have made it through their jobs and training if they hadn't learned the basics and the vocabulary Irwin taught them.

Irwin had one motto of teaching that she strongly believed in.

"Give me a fish, I eat for a day. Teach me to fish, I eat for a lifetime."

It's Not Over until the Fat Lady Sings

"It's not over until the fat lady sings" is an expression used by show people but to senior humanities student, Amy Reid, it had a new meaning.

"I had the impression of the opera being nothing but fat women singing loudly, but when I went to the opera and saw 'La Traviata,' I found it to be very beautiful. I was completely awed by everything I heard and saw," she said.

Humanities, a new arrival in the curriculm, is a college prep course offered only to Senior Literature or Composition students in the enriched track. It covers the history of art, literature, music, and philosophy.

"I love teaching this class. A student who takes both semesters will have the 'big picture' of civilization, and hopefully have an appreciation of our cultural heritage." said Karen Bennett, English.

Once a one semester course, it was expanded to two semesters to allow more time to accomplish its goals.

"I like Humanities because it's a relaxed class. We discuss things openly and our teacher treats us like equals. She listens to and respects our opinions," said senior Grace Vash.

The class participated in many field trips and were given extra credit and discount rates. They went to the opera "La Traviata," a play, "Taming of the Shrew," the ballet, "Phaedra" and to a Greek festival.

Vash thought field trips were an absolute must for the class. She said it would be hard to discuss paintings and music and never get to see or hear them.

"Hohner," whispered offensive fullback Chuck Hall. "Yea, what's up?" said the offensive guard of the undefeated football team, Brent Hohn.

"The bus is so quiet you can hear the rain beating on the top," said Chuck.

Brent looked out the fogged-up window to where the red and blue sirens rotated on top of the escorting police cars.

"Hohner?" whispered Chuck, "Whatcha thinkin' about?"

"The rain, it could be a good sign. Last year when we won State, it was raining," said Brent.

"Yea, this will be our last game at Ben Davis. We gotta take it, man." said Chuck.

When they got off the bus, Chuck noticed the decorated cars whose posters read, "Second Straight in 88" and "The Three Amigos."

"Everybody's behind us," said Chuck.

"Yea, it's a great feeling," said Brent. "The fans, the band, and our parents have been behind us all season."

"I know what you're saying," said Chuck,"If you think the feeling is great now, wait till we win State once more."

Best Ever

"It was these young men's commitment to excellence that now has them in the book of history. I'm certain they will always remember, that day in the dome in late November."

So said Mr. Curtis Carter who wrote a poem that summed up the emotions and feelings of the athletes, coaches, parents, and fans of the Giants football team, which many felt was the best team in Indiana history.

The team motto, "Never Satisfied," was perfect for the '88 season. The team's accomplishments included a second state title, 20 consecutive wins in two seasons, five shutouts, a number one state ranking and a number four national ranking in USA Today's Newspaper poll.

According to Don Rider of USA Today, Ben Davis was totally unstoppable. "They were an absolute brickhouse, and I honestly believe they may have been the best team ever in Indiana history," said Rider.

Good coaching is obviously essential for a strong team and Coach Dick Dullaghan and his staff were there to make sure the team was prepared. Dullaghan, who set a state record in '87 for winning state championships at two different schools, believed that his team was truly one of the best. "We knew we were going to have a good team, and we felt that if the kids worked hard and realized what got them where they were, they were going to be one of the all-time great football teams that have come out of Indiana," said Dullaghan.

Second Straight

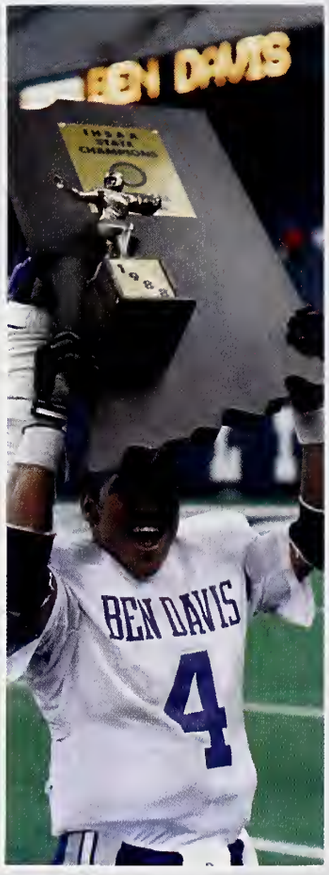

Leading the way were the 26 seniors who, in Dullaghan's opinion, were the backbone of the team. Three of the key ball-carrying seniors on the team, Tank Adams, Dee Dowler, and Scott McGowan, went by the nickname, "The Three Amigos." After every touchdown they would join hands, kneel in the endzone, and pray. "We didn't want to dance or party. We wanted to thank the Lord for our accomplishments," said McGowan.

After the war of the Giants, as it was called, Ben Davis came out on top, beating the Marion Giants by the biggest winning margin in state tournament history, 43-0.

The '88 Giants received the most awards in history, 12 in the All-State catagories, and 18 in the All-County catagories. Senior Kent Britt was one of only 50 players in the state named to the Academic All-State 1st team. "Schooling is just as important to me as football," said Britt.

It was truly a remarkable season. Many have said that the students were the luckiest of all because they got to witness the thrills and excitement of a championship season. Chad Walker, senior, summed it up, "By winning the state title plus all the other victories, the football team has given me a memory of my senior year that not many kids can say they have."

A Step Ahead

Boys' and girls' Cross Country teams had exceptional seasons. The boys qualified for the State meet and the girls for the Regionals. Both teams will have nearly the same team next year, except the boys will be losing varsity runners Jay Snodgrass and Rob Beasley.

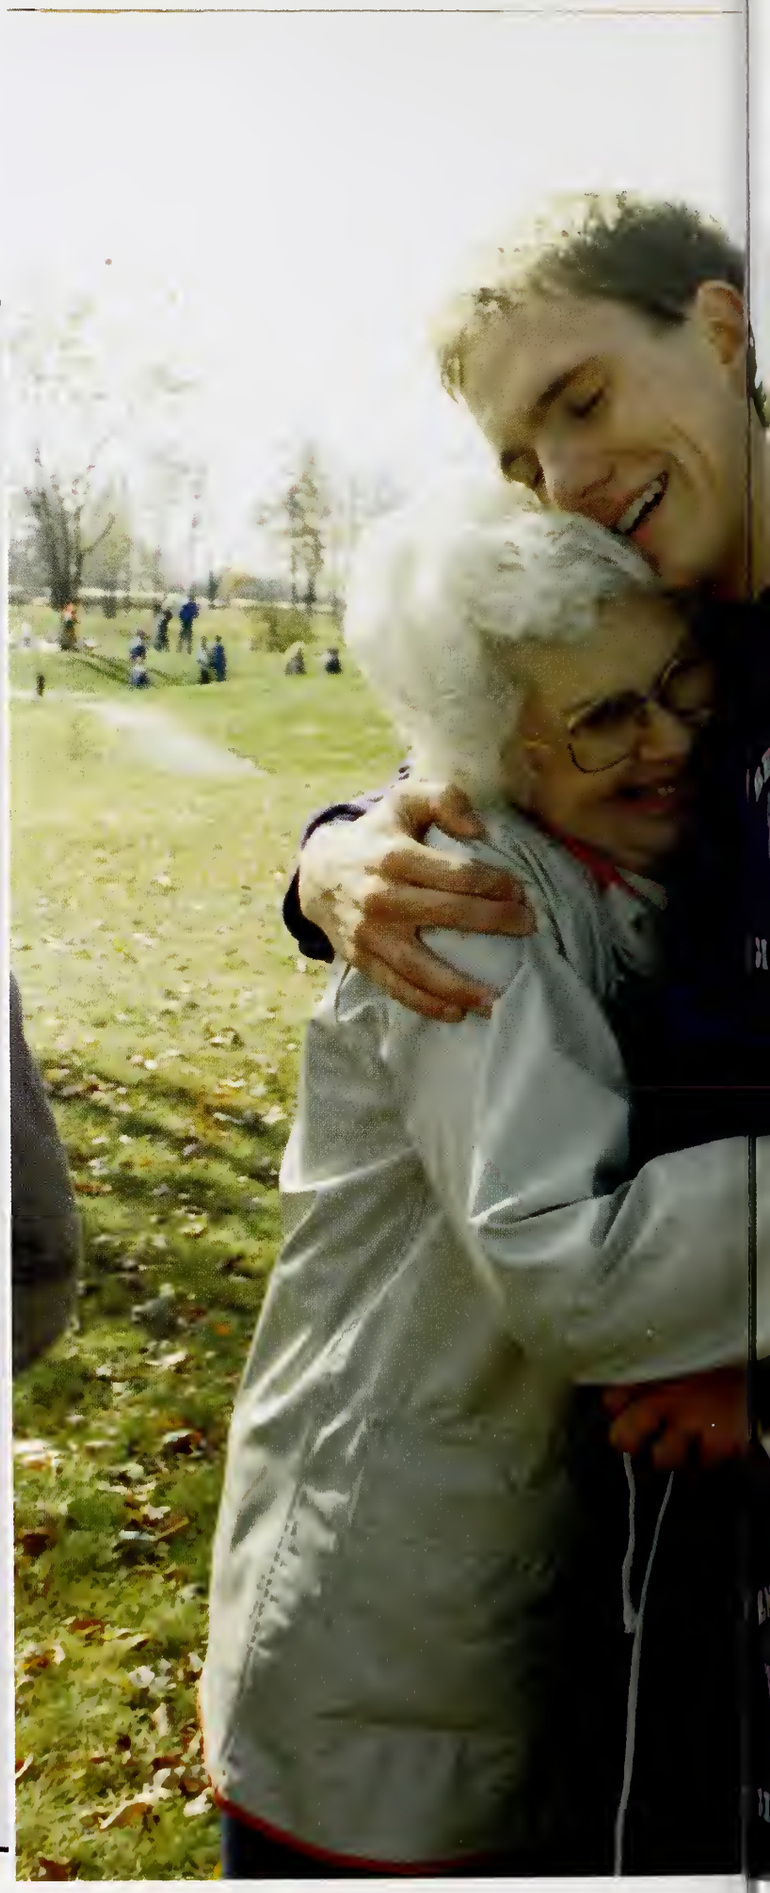

"We will again be very competitive and with some luck be one of the top five teams in the state," said Coach John Jarosinski.

The boys team ran into a little bad luck when top-runner Bryan Huston, junior, was hurt during practice. Huston never fully recovered from the injury but did run in the State meet.

The girls' team ended its season with a regional run. "We went a lot farther than we thought we would and showed how well we could run," said Jody Welsh, junior.

The girls ran hard all year and polished it off with a fifth place at Regionals. Top runners for the girls were Jody Syche and Debbie Portish.

Two Bits Stands the Test of Time

Cheerleading has changed over the past ten years.

Gone are the yell blocks and the spell-out yell competitions. Gone are the cheerleaders leading the crowd in spontaneous cheers, while the seniors sat in the front row wearing matching cord skirts and black and white spalding shoes.

Today's cheerleaders do pyramids, stunts and gymnastics maneuvers. And they perform cheers for the student body, but seldom do they lead the crowd in spontaneous cheers.

"I feel that cheerleading has changed for the better," said Chris Monohan, junior cheerleader. "We perform stunts that are showy and eye-catching to get the crowd's attention and get them involved."

A faculty member who was a cheerleader in high school does not see it that way.

"Now cheerleaders perform rather than lead cheers. Students used to know the words to each cheer. In fact, even the adults knew all the cheers. Today, the cheerleaders are a seperate group doing their own thing."

Although the style of cheerleading has gone through some major changes, both the cheerleader of today and yesteryear are appreciated by the sports department for the dedication to supporting sports.

Found Pot of Gold

With five of the starters returning, the Lady Giants were ready to "reach the rainbow," their ambitious motto for the year.

"In the locker room, we had a large map of Indiana. For each victory we placed a hot air balloon sticker. By the end of the season, we had 31 balloons on the map."

said Coach Priscilla Dillow.

The Lady Giants were Marion County Champions, Sectional Champions, and Regional Champions. "One of our greatest victories was defeating Cathedral in the Regional Final, the first regional win since 1982," said Dillow.

The hard work brought not only team victories but also individual rewards. Monica Bopp, senior, was chosen first team All-Metro, Stephanie Frank, senior, first team All-County, and senior, Kristen Wagner first team All-Metro, All-County, and All-State.

"She settles for nothing but your best," said senior Angie Carter.

Even though the loss to McCutcheon in semi-state was a disappointment, all-in-all the Lady Giants had an exceptional season. In spite of falling short of a State Championship, they did reach for the rainbow.

'Compinsate' for No State

When the wrestling season started, the team set goals that they thought were attainable. They wanted a respectable record of 11-8 and hoped for a top division finish of 8th place or above in the county tourney.

Their accomplishment was actually a 16-3 record and a fourth in county.

"Our goals kept getting higher and higher," said Coach Joe Virgin.

"The 16-3 record did not come easy. Defeats against Decatur, Warren Central, and Lawrence North set the team back but the season was good because of the commitment of the wrestlers. It was fun working with them." said Mimi Kirk, sophomore manager.

"We had a good season. We were satisfied with the final record, said Tim Ross, senior. "We pulled together at the right time and did exactly what we needed to do and the result is a record to be proud of."

In spite of the impressive record, some of the wrestlers were disappointed because no one went to state. The nine wrestlers making semi-state were beaten in the meet, knocking them out of state competition.

"It was rough. The excitement of semi-state picks you up, but then being defeated brings you down," said Geoff Mahan, junior.

"Our team was together at the right times. They 'did their thing'." said Coach Virgin. "They won the Avon Tourney. They won the Brownsburg Tourney. And the lost, too. But those losses were a motivation to do better. We have the talent, now we just have to use it."

"Our first defeat by Lawrence Central did not lift our hopes for the season," said Eric Clemins, sophomore, "but we concentrated and worked, and our record reflects the feats we accomplished and needed to have a season as good as this one."

On the Rebound

After defeating the Speedway Sparkplugs in the first round of the Sectionals 56 to 55, the Giants fell in the second round to the tough Brebeuf Braves 60 to 48. Against Speedway, senior Jock Burns, led the Giants with 13 points and seven rebounds, while Jeff Gradek, junior, helped the team with five points and three rebounds against Brebeuf.

The two starting seniors, Rick Dean and Jock Burns led the team throughout the season. Burns had a total of 269 points and 207 rebounds, while Dean had 87 assists. "They showed a great leadership and played great basketball," said Keith Barnett, junior.

The teams biggest wins were over Warren Central 51 to 49 and Southport 55 to 54. Junior Alfred Witfield was the most valuable player in both games.

"The team got off to a slow start, but later put it together to start winning," said Burns.

Their biggest loss was in double overtime against Terre Haute South, according to Witfield and Antwan Easley, junior. "It was a very dissappointing loss. If we could have gotten just one rebound or scored a basket we could have won the game," said Witfield.

The team members described themselves as aggressive, hardworking, dedicated, determined, and overall high achievers.

The reserve team finished its season with a hard 56 to 55 loss to Muncie Central. The team had an overall record of 15 and 5.

Having six players return from last year's team made Coach Stan Benge's and Coach Kate Silav's season much easier. The Lady Giants basketball team produced a 14-4 record which was the best in team history.

A loss to Tech early in the season seemed to be the turning point to start the team competing. After that defeat, the Lady Giants won nine straight games before losing to aggressive Brebeuf 65-47.

In the Perry Meridian game, seniors, Katie Diggs and Kenna McNeeley, and junior Jenny Orme led the way by scoring of the team's 78 season high points.

Starters-Katie Diggs, Jenny Orme, Amy Arauco, Kenna McNeeley, and Kristye Cherry hoped for a victory in sectional play, but the Lady Giants failed to advance when the Sparkplugs of Speedway upset them by a score of 56-54.

Throughout the season, the Lady Giants shot 61 percent from the line, and 42 percent from the field. Kenna McNeeley led the team in scoring and dominated the free-throw line by shooting over 80 percent. Stephanie George led in assists with 57, and Jenny Orme helped the team with her 56 steals. Look Mom, I'm Upside Down

A sports team not heard too much about is the gymnastics team. Even though the team won six meets and placed sixth in the county, they received little publicity.

Senior Shannon Jensen said that if gymnastics was talked about more, the girls would go out for the sport. "If we did well with five girls, imagine what we could do with 20," said Jensen.

The team's toughest opponents, to whom they lost, were Bloomington South and Perry Meridian.

The team was made up of seniors Jensen, Jenny Monkman, sophomore Jenni Caldwell, and two freshman, Heather Lashbrook and Erin Willoughby.

Jensen, who started gymnastics when she was nine years old, had always wanted to be a part of a high school team. She placed fourth all-around in sectional competition with a score of 34.1 and place second on the vault and floor exercise. Jensen qualified for regional competition in all events. As a result of her performance at regionals, she competed in the ISHHA State Championship in floor exercise and vaulting.

Jenni Caldwell and Jenny Monkman have been on the team for three years.

"Next year the seniors will be gone, but maybe by then more girls will come out for gymnastics and make next year's season a even better one!" said Jenni Caldwell.

After the resignation of Mrs. Freund, the team had to face changing their whole practice routine. Practice was moved to a new facility called West Side Gymnastics. "The change was hard at first because we were used to our way, but it all worked out for the better," said Monkman.

The team was coached by Ms. Vera Ortman and the assistant coach was Ms. Cindy O'Neil.

Down the Line for a Win

Coach Joe Virgin's tennis team produced another winning season with the team finishing fifth in the county and second in the sectionals.

Singles were played by seniors John Williams and Chris Walker, and junior John Davidson. The number one doubles team consisted of sophomores John Householder and Brian Martich. Playing the number two doubles positions were Marcus Weidner and Kevin Wright.

Chris Walker was the individual sectional champion at the number two singles position and was nominated to the All-State Academic Team.

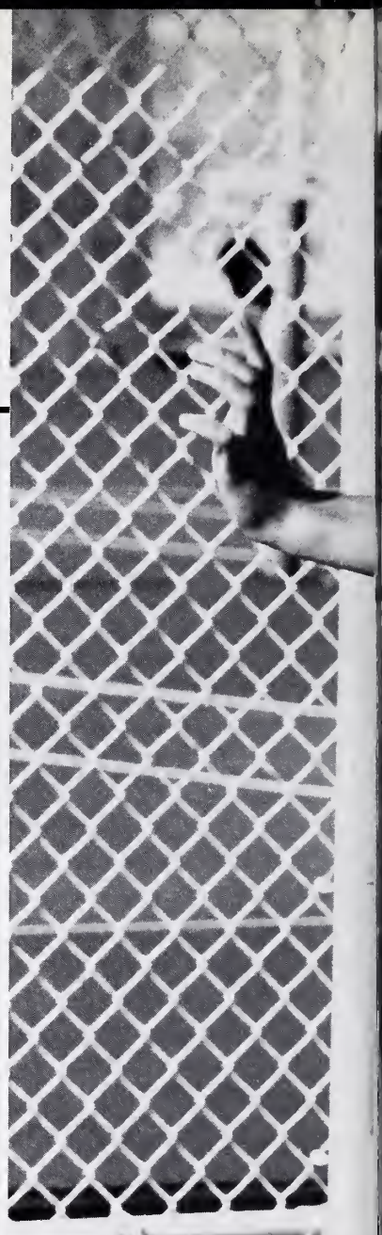

"We couldn't have beaten a lot of our opponents if it weren't for John's great play," said junior John Davidson.

The girls' tennis team, coached by Gary Mahoney, had a good season, finishing second of eight in the Ben Davis Invitational. "Our season got off to a great start and this allowed us to finish strong," said senior Stacy Davis

Playing on the doubles teams were seniors Angie Jones, Staci Davis, and Missy Butcher, and sophomore Michelle Weesies. The team had a competitive schedule which consisted of top-ranked teams such as Brebeuf, Carmel, North Central, and Park Tudor.

"We're out to become one of the top teams in the state," said Coach Gary Mahoney. "To obtain this goal, our players must become more dedicated to the sport of tennis. This requires year round playing."

Stormy Weather Altogether

Just another season? Not quite. The baseball team was ready for anything, and received everything. The team resembled a storm cloud ready to let out all its power to all that stood in its way.

"We were eager to get going," said Coach Dave Brown. "We had enough enthusiasm to last us months at a time."

The season started with their first slaughter of Plainfield 12-0, and climaxed with a 18-1 win over Tri-West for the Regional crown. The Ben Davis bats were alive for a total of 20 runs and 22 hits in the two Regional games as the Giants defeated North Montgomery in the first game 12-1.

But the mighty Giants' journey to State met a roadblock when they fell to North Newton in a heartbreaking 6-5 loss. North Newton's Mike Carden hit the game winning RBI double. The Giants had dreams of victory when they led 5-1 after 6½ innings, but it was not to be.

While dissappointed with the loss, Coach Brown was proud of his team.

"These boys have so much ability," said Coach Brown. "Jason was great and so was Dowler and so was the whole team, as far as that's concerned."

Soul Searching

"You don't have to look at the scoreboard to see who won or lost a game. You just have to look inside yourself," says I.U. coach, Bob Knight.

This rang true for the softball team whose efforts produced wins against Perry Meridian, Brebeuf, and Decatur Central. The win over number 6 ranked Decatur Central, was especially pleasing because the Giants won 8 to 7, in an eight inning game.

Team captain and third baseman Karen Ellsberry, senior, was an aggressive player and proved to be one of Clark's strong players both on the field and at the plate. Another strong player was team pitcher Dahna Hedrick, who said "This year we worked better together."

Coach John Clark agreed, "Dahna has worked very hard in the off season on her pitching and lifting weights. She pitched all winter during the pitching clinic."

Coach Clark's team goal of concentrating on hitting the ball was carried out by Cindy Whipkey, (.636) Jenny Copland, (.641) and Rosie Alderson (.521). A player who showed leadership and helped the other players, according to Coach Clark, was Tracy Van Arsdol. She played short stop, third base, and second base.

Other key players were Monica Bopp, left field, Jennifer Latimer, pitcher, Susie McWilliams, first base, Tammy Imel, first base, and Jenny Orme, second base.

Ranked eighth in state with sectional and county championships and a state champion in diving, the girls' swim team had an exceptional season. Their only defeat was to state champion Carmel. Shannon Jensen, senior, credited her coach, Ms. Laura Breece, for her achievement.

Despite her win, Jensen had feelings of apprehension and fear during her state championship meet.

"During the diving event, I completely ignored the scoreboard. I only knew that the dives I had already performed weren't the best I could have done. I was angry with myself and stunned when I learned I had won." said Jensen.

Ranked 25th in the state, the boys' swim team also had an excellent season. With a 11-3 record and a fourth consecutive sectional win, the boy swimmers proclaimed this season their greatest.

The dedication helped the team defeat Carmel, their number one rival, in the sectionals.

"I think that winning the Carmel relay was the greatest victory," said Shane Stark, senior. "It was the first time in BD history that we won the meet."

Stark felt his most exciting event was after he finished his final dive in the sectionals and knew he had made it to state.

"Placing tenth in the state was like putting a cherry on the top of a successful season," said Stark.

Season Record (11-3)

The number one ranked boys' track team ended its rewarding season with a sectional crown, a second in regionals, and a county championship.

"It was very rewarding to end a difficult season undefeated and to beat North Central." said sophomore Nathan Black.

The Giants greatest wins were over North Central 93 to 58 and Carmel 93 to 34. Coach Hopkins said, "This is a strong team. Because of their performances in dual meet competition, we've earned our number one ranking."

The 57 members on the track team stood firmly by their motto, 57x1, as 57 members worked together to act as one team combining all of their strengths to win.

"This team consists of many outstanding athletes. They are sophomores John Deal and Nathan Black, juniors Derek Wilham, Craig Anthony, and Frank Reeves, seniors Bryan Murphy, Tank Adams, Bryan Huston, and Robert Leeks," said Hopkins.

Robert Leeks held the State record in the long jump and Bryan Murphy held the State record in the discus.

The Lady Giants brought their season to a close with a record of eleven victories, three losses and a sectional title. The team's greatest win was over Plainfield 105 to 13 and Perry Meridian 82 to 36.

"This team had good talent and team spirit, but lack of experience was one of our weaknesses," said Coach Steve Ritter.

"It's good to have a strong team to fall back on." said junior Jody Syck.

Track and field is a sport based on individual effort with team support. "Some of our outstanding individuals were sophomores Kim Hocker, Kara and Alicia Swanson, juniors Jody Syck, and Gretchen Schwartz, seniors Robin Customs, Angie Carter, Shannon Jensen, and Kirsti Lauronen," said Ritter.

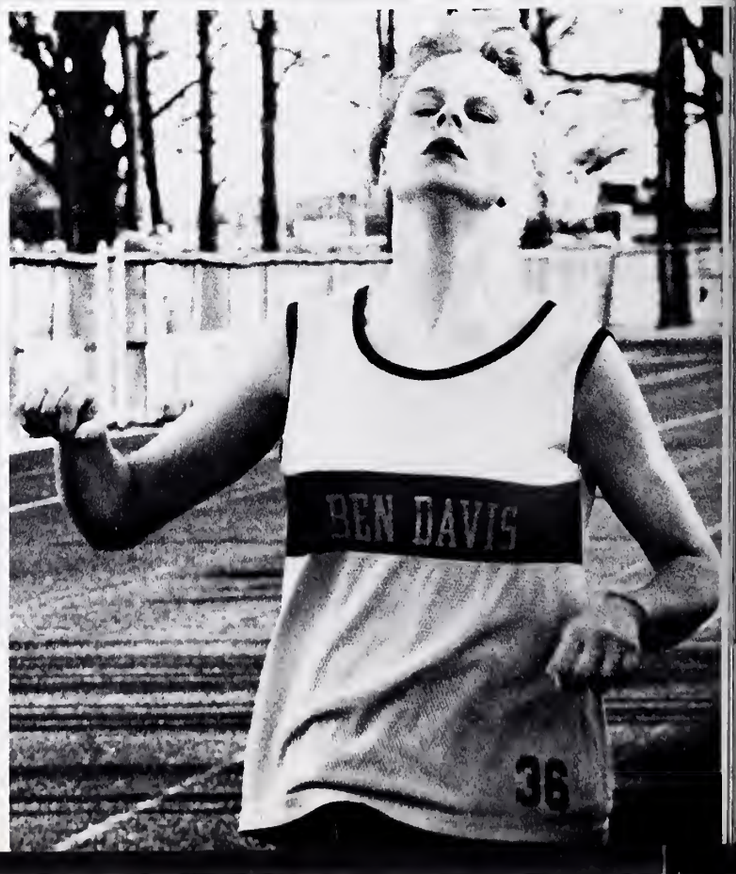

Senior Kirsti Lauronen broke the low hurdle record of 15.9 with 15.8.

Team in Its Place

Early in the season the boys' golf team discovered that confidence is the key to success. They ranked 11th in the state and, according to Coach Bill Despres, it was the first time any Giant golf team had placed at all.

"This season has been great," said Coach Despres, "I couldn't have asked for a better team."

Marion County golf champion and captain of the team, Brandon Rheude, senior, agreed. "The most overlooked player has been Blake Chastain. He has been the soul of our team. In my opinion, he's the greatest," said Rheude.

Junior Matt Cornacchonie felt competition was stiff."The new freshmen, Trent Bell and Eric Cooper, were really good." said Cornacchonie. "They helped make this season a big surprise. A lot of patience and maturity are needed to deal with playing any sport, but after a game has been won, we all feel it has been worth it."

The girl's golf team also had an enjoyable season.

"One time when I drove the ball down the fairway, I thought I had killed a bird. The ball hit a tree and then a bird fell out," said Senior Jenni Rumple.

Since all of the players, except one, were rookies, the team had a hard time against competition.

"Cathedral has a good golf team so their players helped us if we were unsure about the rules or how to play," said junior Kelly Vargo.

The hardest part of the game for Rumple was mastering the putting green, where it often took 20 putts to put the ball in the hole.

The team's best match was against Pike. The whole team did well and junior Leslie Cunningham and Rumple achieved 56 and 50, their best scores.

Sockin' It to 'em with Spunk

When the pass was intercepted, he kicked the ball upfield to the forward. His teammate centered the ball and it was kicked past the opponent's goalie. The team scored against Southport, one of the toughest teams in the league.

Sophomore Alex Poladian reflected that game, "I think that game was the turning point of our season. It shows what a reward a little teamwork can be."

Despite early injuries and a few other mishaps, the soccer team, coached by Rick Crosslin, Jim Hartsock, and volunteer coach Charlie Fitts, proved to be competitive under the leadership of junior team captains Ryan Kinkead and David Crawford. Assistant coach Jim Hartsock said, "We've made a tremendous comeback in the last several games. Our opponents coaches complimented us that we had a very disciplined team, and excellant passing skills. In the past three years that I have coached here, this team will listen and go out and execute. Even though we are small in size, we had aggressive players that wouldn't back down. The team was the most coachable team we've had."

Crawford, junior, captain, said, "This year was like a transition period because the young players had to become more developed."

The team hosted numerous foreign exchange students such as seniors Gustavo Gomez from Columbia, John Lauritzen from Denmark, and Lars Nilsen from Norway. Their experience aided in the team's success. Fullbacks Troy Weirick and Lars Nilsen played hard on defense with young talent coming from sweeper Kevin Mullins.

The team facing a tough, competitive schedule, defeated Roncalli 3-0 and later lost to Decatur Central and Center Grove.

"I feel we played as well as other teams. We just didn't get all the breaks we needed." said sophomore Jason Reid.

As the year progressed, the team defeated New Palestine and its early season rival, Southport.

"Even though we didn't have many players, our bench was productive and helped us throughout the season," said Kinkead.

Wait...There's More!

More Than You Think

It is 3B club period time and most of the people in Adam's geometry class are leaving the room.

"Where are you going?"asked Adam Berry, sophomore.

"I'm going to Spanish Club." said John Deal, sophomore. "Why aren't you in a club?"

"I thought it would be boring, and I could really use the study time," said Adam. "I hear all you do is sit around and talk, but never do anything."

"That's not true. There's more to a club than just sitting around. It is a lot of fun. In Spanish Club we play games, sing Spanish songs and also learn a lot about the Spanish language."

"Are you guys talking about clubs?" asked Carrie Fiddler, sophomore. "I'm in SADD and it also is a lot of fun. We don't play games or sing songs, but we sure do learn a lot. We try to influence teens not to drink and drive. It's good to know that we're trying to keep students away from alcohol and drunk driving."

"Well, we better go, John. Club period is about to begin." said Carrie.

"Bye, Adam."

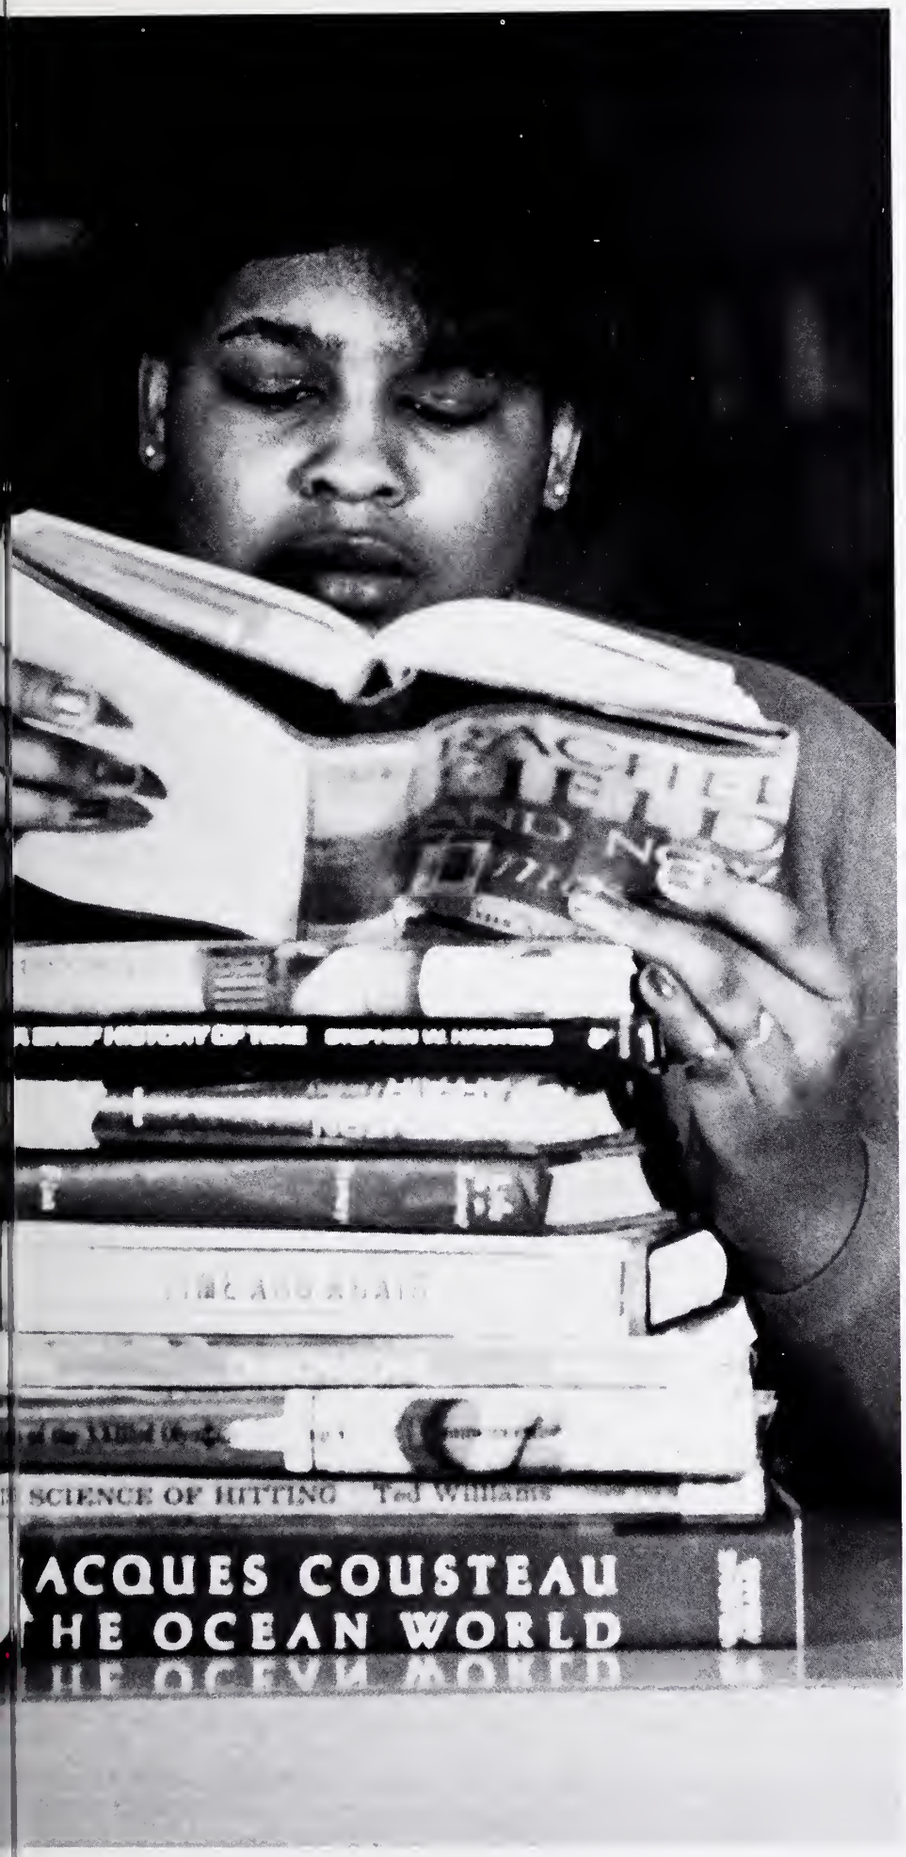

"Later, Adam."

Here it is Working Experience

Hands-on training is what it was all about. Distributive Education Clubs of America, better known as DECA, helped to prepare students to enter the business world by offering opportunities for "hands-on" training as a sales representative or other selling jobs.

Among the eighteen students receiving hands-on training were senior Scott Simpson, a sales clerk at AutoWorks, senior Johnny Balding, a sales clerk at J. Riggins, and Devon Ragland, employed at Penske Leasing. "DECA gives me the experience needed to do a job, and do it well," commented Balding.

To give students experience in selling and fund raising the members raised $14,000 through selling 225 Entertainment '89 coupon books. Net profit came to $6,000, to be used for state conference and club projects. The also sold "I Love DECA" buttons and conducted a candy sale.

DECA recently donated $100 to the Ronald McDonald House at Riley Hospital. The money bought 10 bricks for the planned expansion.

Sophomore Valteressa Stitts said, "I think more students should get involved in DECA. The club is worthwhile and teaches us about the business world."

Look beyond Books

Being recognized for their outstanding grades and character gave the students in the National Honor Society confidence and an over all good feelings about themselves.

Every member of the National Honor Society was nominated by one of his teachers for having leadership, character, and academic ability.

"Being a member of the National Honor Society is the greatest academic award a student can achieve," said Ms. Jean Prichard, sponsor.

To be elected to the society, the students had to maintain a 3.5 grade point average through out the year. "It took a lot of hard work and many hours," said senior Lisa Fraley.

Ben Davis was only one chapter in a national organization that covered the United States and Canada. At Ben Davis alone there were 60 out of 800 seniors in the National Honor Society.

Members of NHS don't spend all of their time studying. They were involved in a number of service projects, such as decorating a school Christmas tree, helping to organize the convocation for all of the honor roll students, and participating in the tutoring program during and after school, which every member had to dedicate a few hours a day.

"Our two biggest service projects were the Honor Roll certificate convocation and the tutoring program. I think every student in NHS had some sense of self-gratitude and felt they achieved something in their high school years. It was self-rewarding," said Prichard.

When National Honor Society students apply to a college, or for a job, they will be recognized as hard working students.

"After all the time and effort I've spent in the past 12 years, I know one way or another it's going to pay off, and that makes me feel good." said Fraley. "Tutoring is one of the projects that I worked on. I helped some students learn how to study for tests so they could pass them. It felt really good to be helping other students."

The National Naggers

Debate teacher Larry Highbaugh believes the debaters, including the novice and advanced debaters, had their best season in years.

"In think we've had an exceptionally good year," said Highbaugh. "We have had a great number of people participating and had a lot of success from our novice and advanced debaters."

Two advanced debaters, seniors Joe Zompetti and Chris Deal, qualified for the nationals.

"I had hoped for it," said Zompetti. "It was something that I was looking forward to for a long while. And when it finally rolled around, it was all well worth the wait."

After all the debate tourneys were ended in mid-February, the students focused their attention on the speech tournaments which took place in the second semester. These speech tournaments consisted of 12 catagories. At these tournaments the student discussed and explained the topic they had chosen.

"It was all a test of your skill. It took a lot of time to prepare for these speeches. It was hard work, but there's no doubt it was worth the time and effort." said Clay Clark, sophomore.

"I felt we would have a good year," said Highbaugh, "and with Zompetti and Deal going to the nationals and Dumond going to the Lincoln-Douglas, it made the good year much better."

Each student had his own ranking. These rankings started at one and went to six, six being superior. Joe Zompetti and Jason Lawson were two debaters with this highest ranking. Others, even sophomores, were moving up with three and four rankings.

Mike Jechura, senior, Donovan White, junior, qualified to participate in the National Student Congress in Golden Colorado during the week of June 11-17. They will participate with the other national qualifiers. "We had an an outstanding season," said Highbaugh.

Not Playing about Drunk Driving

In an attempt to convince teenagers not to drink and drive, "Students against Drunk Driving," (SADD) wrote and produced a play, titled, "One Saturday Night." With the increase in drunk driving accidents in the Indianapolis area, students wanted to do their part to stop the tragedies. Many students don't take drinking and driving seriously until its too late, we want to scare people so they don't take stupid chances," said Tammy Dean, junior.

The play portrayed an alcoholic mother who has a car accident while driving with her daughter and her friend. The daughter and her friend are killed.

Since 125,000 people are injured each year in the United States by drunk drivers, forty-five percent of whom are teenagers, and the 16-24 age group is responsible for 8,000 deaths a year and disfigurment of 40,000 young people, the play had a message.

SADD members also took part in a 10K walk in conjunction with Student Council to raise funds.

The True Gift of Life

With a 15 percent increase in attendance the blood drive supplied more blood to the Indianapolis community than last year. "We hold the drive as a community effort to help the Indiana Regional Blood Center," said Nelson Dowell, Student Council.

The blood center, a nonprofit organization, operated on the concept of "Community Responsibility" and is dependant on volunteer blood donations. "Since Ben Davis is so large, we thought we could get a lot of volunteers," said Dowell.

Health Occupations class was the first to start the drive but was unable to promote the program alone. "Health Occupations has always sponsored the drive, but they needed help to attract more people so that's where student council came in," said Troy Weirick, senior.

Blood was needed in Indianapolis for many different emergencies such as elective surgery, cancer patients, maternity patients, burn victims, and others. "We're donating blood to help people who have injuries or illnesses," said Shonda McGuire, senior.

The demand for blood has greatly increased over the years. With 500 units used daily in 40 regional hospitals in Indiana, 200 people's blood from the drive will only last half a day. "The blood we give won't last long but every little bit helps," said Stephanie Sullivan, senior.

Honorable Hombres

With an enrollment of over 190 students, the Spanish club tripled its enrollment over the past six years.

"College bound students make up the majority of the club members, but activities such as guest speakers, Christmas caroling, and the Peace Corps Partnership program have made the club popular with other students," said Mr. Tom Alsop, department head.

Excelling in the program was senior Brandy Bell who was a member of the Spanish National Honor Society and a scholarship finalist in the language. David Hatchett ranked as one of the top three scorers on the National Spanish Exam.

Along with scholarships, students furthered their knowledge by exploring the cultures of foreign countries. Seniors Chris Deal was named an I.U. Honors Student. He spent the summer of 1988 in Mexico. "Not only was I exposed to the Spanish language, but I experienced cultural activities that cannot be simulated in the classroom," said Deal. Other students were also offered the same opportunity.

The scholarship and financial aid program received a boost when the parents of Rob Swift, a 1988 graduate, gave two memorial scholarships in the amount of $500 to an outstanding male and female student. Swift had been recognized as one of the top Spanish students in the United States.

Spanish students were involved in capturing a fourth consecutive state championship. The State Academic Competition team consisted of juniors Shari Sweet, Matt Cornacchione, Dan Bain, Cliff Sweazy, and seniors Brandy Bell, Joe Koss, Chris Deal, Julie Cauldwell, and Dorothy McFarland.

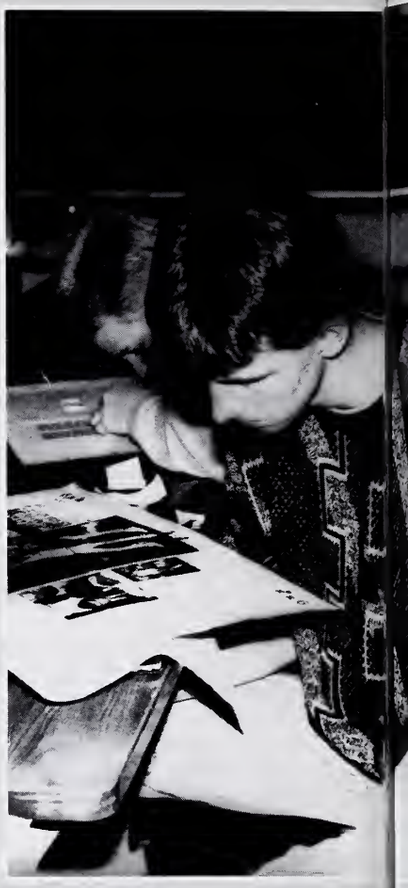

"The extensive verbal practice in class creates a good basis for Spanish Competitions," said Koss.

"The Spanish Club gives students the opportunity to listen and speak Spanish socially, outside classroom setting. Students can learn about the cultures in many Spanish-speaking countries. The officers do an outstanding job of providing leadership." said Alsop.

Students Shoot for a Turkey

You don't have to be good to have fun" was the motto of the new Bowling Club, sponsored by Mr. Carl Nelson, Home/School Advisor.

Even if you're not a good bowler, you can be in the club," said Nelson. "We have all skill levels and handicap levels to even out the good and poor bowlers."

With a membership of 18 bowlers and six teams, the club doubled in size in one semester. To belong, club members had to be students, have their own transportation to Western Bowl, and pay $2.75 every week.

One of the clubs long term goals is to get other schools involved in competition. "We think it would be neat to compete with other schools. We want to start competing like other sports, but it is also neat to play against ourselves,"said junior Matt Smallwood.

However, most bowlers feel the game should be fun, not competitive.

"I've bowled ever since I can remember," said Karla Pierle, senior. "My whole family is involved and enjoys it."

Senior Becky Small agreed. "I'm glad we finally got the Bowling club at the high school. I enjoyed bowling in junior high school, and I missed it."

The top bowlers of last semester were League Champs, Team 1.

Wait...There's More!

More Than A Mate

Coming out of the theatre after seeing Rainman starring Dustin Hoffman, sophomore Amy Calvin shared these thoughts with her best friend, Gina Symmonds. "There's so much more to friendship than just being near a person," she said.

"Yeah, there's more to some movies than entertainment," said Amy. "Just as in Beaches, which we saw last weekend, two people got separated for a long time. When they both grew up, they get reaquainted. It was as if a part of their lives had been fulfilled when they met." said Amy. "I just hate it when movies end like that!" laughed Amy.

"You know, these things don't just happen in the movies," said Gina.

"It's going to happen to us too because when we graduate, all of our friends will leave, just like in the movies. We may not ever see them again."

"Do you think we'll have a happy or sad ending?" asked Gina.

"I don't know, but I'm going to enjoy high school life and the friends and people who are around to enjoy it with!"

"Yeah, me too!"

Tree's Company

In order to prepare for the Christmas season, senior Rick Groce decorates a tree. Groce is a member of the National Honor Society which involves many extra activities and duties. For Groce, Christmas is a time for giving and this is one of many ways he and other NHS members contributed during the holidays. Photo by Jenni Rumple.

One for the Road

Sometimes after school was the only time to catch up on gossip because friends were rarely seen during the day. The size of the school caused friends to be separated, but some took advantage of sports activites, lunch periods and passing time to visit with friends for short periods of time. Senior Carrie Walker discusses the day's happenings with her friends. Photo by Matt Bingham.

Method to his Madness

In order to make classes more interesting, teachers often used educational games to catch student interest. Mellow Fellow

Photographer Paul Sizemore, senior, enjoys reading magazines about creative photography. He uses the tips he picks up for his photography class and in his role as assistant photo editor. "I get a wealth of ideas from magazines such as American Photographer that I use for my yearbook assignments," said Sizemore. Photo by Matt Bingham.

Brandi of the Redwoods

After five inches of snow fell around the Indianapolis area, senior Brandi Coffman takes a walk through Marrot Park in Broad Ripple. "Winter is my favorite season. I love the snow. It's cool and refreshing. Everything is really white and pretty. Being by myself outside during the winter gives me a safe feeling. Everything is quiet and peaceful. I really enjoy it," said Coffman. Mother Goose

By a canal in Broad Ripple, senior foreign exchange student Wiebke Jacobson spends time with the ducks. Jacobson's brother in Germany raises ducks, and this encounter took her mind back to those she left at home. "I can't say that I enjoy one country more than the other. It's hard to make a comparison because they're so different, but I do miss Germany," she said. Photo by Paul Sizemore.

Elvis Is Alive

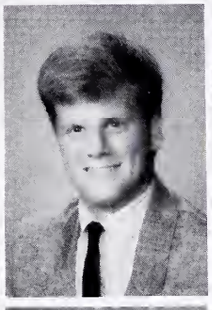

While singing his rendition of 'Boogers', senior Andrew Sanchez draws the attention of many passing students. Although playing a musical instrument in the hallways is forbidden, Sanchez risked playing for his friends. He brought his guitar to do a skit for Humanities class. Sanchez also plays in various bands. "I got in trouble for playing my guitar and it was bogus. I feel people should be able to express what they enjoy," said Sanchez. Photo by Matt Bingham.

Glad To Add

Because of the growing number of students, 2650, Ben Davis is undergoing a six million dollar renovation. The football stadium and gymnasium are complete while plans for additional science labs and classrooms will be ready for the 1989 school year. Photo by Matt Bingham.

Back To School

At open house, physics teacher Mr. Walt Davis shows parents what their kids are taught during class. Davis explains to parents Mr. James Butts, Ms. Donna Niederhouser and Ms. Margaret Lineback how a pulse glass vaporizes a liquid causing it to rise. "Some parents have not had physics, so I showed them the basic concepts. Sometimes explaining things isn't good enough. I always say a picture is worth a thousand words." said Davis. Don't Mock Me!

In order to get students to practice their civil duty, Ben Davis held a mock election where students could vote for a Presidential candidate using a real voting machine. Junior Bryan Huston registers to vote in the cafeteria. "I think it's great that the school is interested in our input, after all we are affected by Presidential decisions as much as those who are old enough to vote," said Huston. Photo by Jenni Rumple.

BD Boarderline

Students found their own ways to occupy spare time. Some worked, others studied, some played sports, and some found unusual activities to entertain themselves. Jason Wright, sophomore, jumps off a ramp on a single board with wheels. This popular activity is known as skating. "I'm doing a Japan Air. It's where you kind of turn your board as you jump off a ramp. It sounds stupid, but it makes me feel like a different person. It helps me escape everyday toils," said Wright. Photo by Matt Bingham.

To Be or Not To Be

Sitting in the hallway outside their Drama 1 class sophomores Neal Crisp and Mark Ashcraft study their monologue called "You Can't Take It With You." Crisp said, "Drama is what I want to do with my life, so the class is not only a necessity but it is fun." Ashcraft said, "My favorite activity is monologue, because I can work with a partner. We compete to see who can act the best portraying the charactors." Photo by Jenni Rumple.

Not Just Faces in the Crowd

An intense moment during a football game at Southport High School has sophomore cheerleaders Missy Marcum and Natalie Carty watching hopefully. Marcum and Carty have been cheerleaders together since seventh grade at Ben Davis Junior High School. "Being a Ben Davis cheerleader means a lot to me. I have fun watching the team and cheering them on," said Carty. The friendship between the two girls is special to Carty, "Missy and I have been friends for the longest time, and this year we have become especially close. I hope we stay friends forever."

Why Me?

For the Prelude Awards junior Jennifer McQueen competed to win the Quadrant Division and advanced on to the finals in hopes of achieving a $5000 scholarship. Although she didn't win, she found the competition an enjoyable experience. "I practiced after school for a couple of months before the competion," said McQueen. "I feel all my hard work and effort really paid off." Photo by Paul Sizemore.

A Helping Hand

Because of her handicap, sophomore Renee Rooker used the elevator to get to the second floor. Students in wheelchairs who are unable to get up stairs are given elevator keys to allow them to attend classes. "We all have keys and our lockers are together. It helps us to get around which is more of an incentive to come to school," said Rooker. Photo by Jenni Rumple.

Year of the Giant

After accepting the regional trophy for the football team, Dr. James Mifflin, principal, shows it to the student body at a pep sesion. Dr. Mifflin also recieved personal recognition when the governor of Indiana, Bob Orr, presented him with the Sagamore of the Wabash Award for his contributions to education. The Sagamore is the highest honor the governor is allowed to give. Photo by Jenni Rumple.

Where's Mickey?

Before semi-state, Mr. Don Ireland, mathematics, prepares for defeat by the girls' volleyball team. The faculty didn't have much of a chance against the regional champions, but the match performed during the pep session was a way to honor the varsity girls for their accomplishments. Often the faculty got together to entertain students during convocations. Ireland along with other staff members supported the athletic teams whenever needed. Photo by Paul Sizemore.

Tracey McCormack,

Childhood dreams, paper dolls, your first heartbreak in love. Our precious little girl, so quickly you've grown up. We wish you happiness and love in all you pursue. But Tracey, most importantly, we're all so proud of you.

Love,
Dad and Sandy

Michelle,

I am so proud of you. We have made it through a lot together. I know you can achieve your goals, so go for the gold. I've been with you for the last eighteen years, and I'll still be here as you get older. I'll be behind you in whatever you want out of life.

Love,
Mom

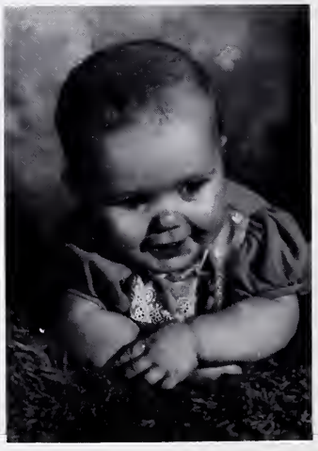

Diana,

These years have gone by so fast and here you are the 'last of six' to graduate from Ben Davis. I want you to know how proud we are of you and everything you've accomplished: Choir, Purple-Aires, volunteer work, and your job. I know you worked hard especially in your senior year. As you leave this era of your life, I wish you lots of luck and success in your future. So follow your dreams and most of all, I wish you happiness . You're a beautiful and special person. I love you very much.

Mom

Dear Mark,

It's so hard to believe that you are all grown up and ready to move on to college. We appreciate how hard you have worked in school and are so proud of you and all of your achievements. To decide at the age of 17 what you want to do at 47 is a difficult decision but just know that we support and affirm you in whatever you choose. May God's blessings be with you in all that you are and will become.

Love,
Mom

Lana,

It seems like only yesterday that I was putting you on the bus for kindergarden and now you are about to graduate from high school. I would like to take this opportunity to say I love you and how very proud you have made me throughout the years of all of your accomplishments. I shall treasure all of the memories.

Love,
Mom

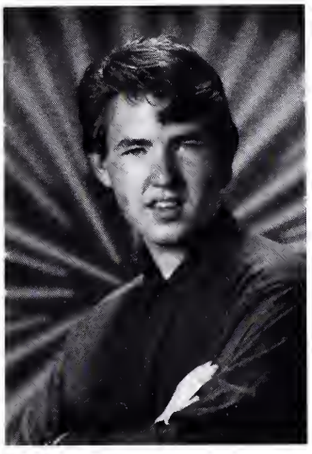

Paul Bartley Sizemore,

I am so proud of you and I love you very much. We are behind you no matter what you decide to do in life. Just be happy!

Love,
Mom and Bob

Matt,

You have always been a source of pride for me. To me, you have always represented what a young man should be. You showed maturity when needed and responsibility when called upon. You're outlook on life, talent, and sense of humor have brought inspiration to me and many others. Use these as your strenghts for the future amd you will obtain any goals you choose t o conquer.

Love,
Mom

Becky Cobern,

As I watched you grow from a first grader into a beautiful young senior, my hopes and dreams for you grew also. The wrong world took you from me, but it can never take away my love for you. I'll always be there for you.

Love Forever,
Mom

Wait...There's More!

More Than Word of Mouth

"And furthermore I'd like to sum up my speech by telling you why my Aunt Myrtle's goat farm is the neatest place to go for Spring Break..."

Mr. Highbaugh's tenth period Speech 1 class grew restless as sophomore Candi Foster recited her speech.

"Will she ever shut up?" said sophomore Amy Calvin.

I think she is the only one who really gets into what she's saying." said sophomore Gina Symmonds.

"Yeah, her and ol' Highbaugh."

"Speaking of Mr. Highbaugh, did you know that he's the 24th teacher in the United States to receive a fourth star in the N.F.L.?"

"I didn't know you got stars in football."

"What?"

"I didn't know Mr. Highbaugh even played football."

"That's N.F.L.--National Forensic League, not National Football League! Anyway, Mr. Highbaugh is the second debate coach in Indiana to receive a fourth diamond. That means for every ten points a person on the debate team receives, Mr. Highbaugh gets one. He's accumulated over 100,000 points."

"That's pretty neat."

"Oh, by the way, are you going to the Arts Alive Festival?"

"Probably not, why?"

"You should go."

"Why? It's just going to be a bunch of drawings and paintings, stuff like that."

Oh, it's a lot more than that! Senior Lisa Lawrence's art work is going to be displayed. Didn't you know, she and Dean Rains are the winners of the Scholastic Contest thing-a-ma-bob?"

"Wasn't Lisa one of the gold key finalists?"

"Yeah, I think so."

"If you ask me, her art work is O.K. but, I like Dean's a lot more." Continued

All students attend pep rallies in order to support their fellow Giants. Dr. James Mifflin, principal, shows his pride at a rally to support winter athletics. Photo by Paul Sizemore.

Sophomore Scott Wolfe believes there is more to life than all work and no play. "Juggling is like life," said Wolfe. "You have to keep all the balls going at once." Photo by Matt Bingham.

Wait...There's More!

More to It Than YouThink

"I was talking to Mr. Corwin, the head of the math department, and he said that B.D. might be the first school to try a new math class called "Mathematics of Technology. I think my C- in geometry outlaws me from that class!!"

"Same for me, I'm getting a D."

"I think one of the things I miss is basketball season."

"Now you're talking!"

"I went to all but two games, and the reason I didn't go to those, was because I had the flu. If my temperature had dropped, I would've gone!!"

"You're silly!"

"So how are you and Doug doing?"

"OK, I guess. It seems all we do is argue."

"I know what you mean. Mike and I are having problems in that area too."

"Can you imagine getting an award for arguing?"

"What do you mean?"

"I mean actually getting recognition for arguing with someone,"

"The only thing arguing has gotten me is heartbreak."

"Well that too, But the debate team has gotten a lot of recognition, especially Nathan Dumond, Joe Zompetti and Chris Deal."

"Joe Spaghetti?"

"Joe Zompetti, you goof!! He and Chris Deal are going to compete in a national debate in Golden, Colorado."

"And Nathan Dumond??"

"He's going to re-enact the Lincoln-Douglass Debate."

"Well, if you ask me, I couldn't do it."

"Do what?"

"Stand in front of all those people.

After grabbing a bite to eat, seniors Grace Vash and John Lephart enjoy an afternoon together. Although having a friend at school made life a little brighter, friends and couples showed that there's more to life than just school. Photo by Paul Sizemore.

More Than Making Music

"A cool contest B.D. participated in was the solo and ensemble choir competion at North Central High School."

"What happened?"

"WE happened. We had 18 first place ratings and six second place ratings."

"Wow, that's a lot of winners!"

"Gretchen Reese, Vickie Wood, and Neal Crisp are a few of the people who competed."

"Miss Social, could you pull yourself away from Miss Calvin long enough to give your speech for the class?"

Gina walks slowly to the podium, glances around, and begins.

Colophon

Jostens Printing and Publishing Corporation of Clarksville, Tennessee, printed the 1989 Keyhole. Dick Maurer served as the technical advisor while Sheila Maddox was the in-plant customer service advisor for the book.

Michelle Gurley designed the cover and Wendi Hodapp the endsheet artwork.

The graphics for the theme "Wait...There's More!," were done in Brush Script type style to reflect the fact that there is more to Ben Davis than meets the eye.

All body copy and group captions were typeset by the Keyhole staff members using 8200 Compugrahics Phototypesetter located in room A223. Headlines and the index were done on the MacIntosh Computers in room B131. Headlines in the opening section were set in Geneva type style, the student life section in New Century Textbook style, the sports section in the Alternate Gothic Palatino style, while those in the clubs were set in Avant Garde style.

All color photographs were taken by Keyhole photographers and printed by CPI Photofinish and Matrix in Indianapolis, Indiana.

The Keyhole staff wishes to thank Mr. Dick Maurer, Ms. Kay Radtke, Ms. Peggy Sandberg, and Ms. Martha Frownfelter for their support, hardwork, and time they contributed to the Keyhole.
